In its present form this play is dedicated to the reading public only, and no performances of it may be given, except by special arrangement with the owner of the acting rights, who may be addressed in care of the publishers.

SECTION 28.—That any person who wilfully and for profit shall infringe any copyright secured by this Act, or who shall knowingly and wilfully aid or abet such infringement, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by imprisonment for not exceeding one year or by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars, or both, in the discretion of the court.

SECTION 29.—That any person, who, with fraudulent intent, shall insert or impress any notice of copyright required by this Act, or words of the same purport, in or upon any uncopyrighted article, or with fraudulent intent shall remove or alter the copyright notice upon any article duly copyrighted shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars and not more than one thousand dollars.—Act of March 4, 1909.

INTRODUCTION

Doubtless because the majority of his earlier plays were produced at the Gaiety Theatre, Manchester, and, perhaps more particularly, because Hobson's Choice, his first long play to be given in America, is a study of Lancashire life, the work of Harold Brighouse seems to be too closely identified with that of Miss Horniman's Repertory Company. This is regrettable only insofar as it tends to give the impression that all his plays have a local character. Actually the sixteen plays, long and short, which have already been performed cover a wide range in setting and subject, and out of this number only five have a Lancashire background, and only six have been played by Miss Horniman's company. Again, it is a mistake to imagine that the Manchester Theatre in any way specializes in local plays. On the contrary, catholicity has always been its watchword. At its inauguration it had one prime object, the production of good plays irrespective of any kind or class into which they might be grouped. There was no special axe to be ground, no particular theory of production or playwriting to be exploited.

While it is necessary to bring this point forward, one would not seek to minimize the value and importance of the local drama. Harold Brighouse is a Manchester man, and those of his plays which deal with Lancashire life are the most richly individualized. So, too, the most far-reaching result of Miss Horniman's Theatre has been the growth of a Lancashire drama which has made Lancashire live for thousands where before it was no more than an empty name.

It was the establishment in their midst of a theatre mainly devoted to the production of new plays which gave Manchester writers an impetus toward the drama. That their output took the form, to a great extent, of local plays is probably largely due to the fortunate chance that the theatre opened its doors at the time when the Irish Players, who gave the great stimulus to the Folk Drama, were in the meridian of their success. In any case, there can be no question that Lancashire life is so rich in individual traits and its verbal expression is rendered so colorful by its uncompromising dialect that the dramatist found in it a rich-veined mine.

INTRODUCTION

One of the first to explore this mine and quite the most successful, with the possible exception of Stanley Houghton, whose work was so tragically cut short by his early death, was Harold Brighouse. His first long play, Dealing in Futures (produced originally by the Glasgow Repertory Theatre), is a study of industrial conditions and the century-long contest between capital and labor. The external facts would apply with almost equal exactitude to any manufacturing community, but the characters are unmistakable Lancashire types. It is not a plea for any particular solution of the social problem, nor, though the author's sympathy with the workers is clear enough, does it display anything of the fervor of the reformer. For an early play it shows a remarkable sense of dramatic construction, and it is characteristic of the author's subsequent work in that it is a play of character rather than of situation.

The first example of the author's work to be given in Manchester was a short one-act sketch, The Doorway. This is little more than a dialogue between two outcasts, a man and a woman, strangers to each other, who meet by chance in the shelter of a factory door and find mutual comfort in telling over their misfortunes and their past adventures as they huddle together in the biting cold of the small hours of a winter's morning. This play, too, is indicative of the author's development; the characterization is markedly individual, clear-cut, and sympathetic, and the dialogue is full of a quaint humor which is essentially of the theatre. In all Harold Brighouse's plays there is in the acting more laughter than one would expect from the reading. The actors invariably experience a sense of surprise and pleasure when they discover in performance that the public finds far more humor in their parts than they themselves were aware of during the period of preparation.

Harold Brighouse is a prolific writer. He has been particularly successful in the field of the one-act drama, a field almost entirely neglected in America, and in England too often regarded solely as the despised "curtain-raiser," useful to keep the gallery quiet whilst the late diners dribble into the stalls.

His most noteworthy examples of the one-act form are, perhaps, Spring in Bloomsbury, a realistic picture of the hopeless struggle of mediocrity as exemplified in a conscientious but ungifted young London clerk; it is a successful example of what has been defined as the drama of revolt; The Price of Coal, a swift little play depicting in bold colors the uncertainties and hazards of the miner's life; it was originally written in Lancashire dialect, but for its first performance by the Glasgow Repertory Company it was transposed into the Scotch idiom, in which form it was played several hundred times in Great Britain as a curtain-raiser to Buntty Pulls the Strings, and, especially, Lonesome Like, which belongs to the same genre as Hobson's Choice and in which the author reaches a very high development of the one-act form. The theme is simple. A shy young engineer, his sensitive and unconsciously poetic nature stunted intellectually by the rough atmosphere of factory life, is suffering from loneliness since the death of his mother a year before. Failing in his all too clumsy love affair, he turns to an old woman, disabled by rheumatism and about to be taken to the poorhouse, and "adopts her as his mother." This is all, but the story is told so winningly, the dialogue is so vibrant with natural humor, and the dénouement—the old woman's release from the shame of pauperism and the boy's rapture at the solution of his problem—is so neatly turned that the play is a masterpiece in miniature.

Of the several long plays which Harold Brighthouse has to his credit the most important are, The Odd Man Out, a comedy of middle-class life—realism with a dash of fantasy—which was produced at the Royalty Theatre, London; Garside's Career, a study of the career of a callow young Socialist orator who advances rapidly to a seat in Parliament, where his head is turned by the insidious atmosphere of social aggrandizement; he forgets his ideals, neglects his duties, and tumbles, discredited, into an abyss of failure; this play, performed in Manchester and London, as well as on tour, has been the author's most successful play prior to Hobson's Choice; The Northerners, a play of the eighteen twenties, when the handloom weavers, cast from comparative affluence to a state of extreme poverty by the introduction of machinery, rose in revolt and sought to destroy the factories. In this play situation is an important factor, a fine moment being the termination of the third act, when the soldiers, who have been brought to quell the rioters, are enticed on to the moors by lanterns hung upon the sheep, and only discover their error at the moment when the sky is illumined by flames from the burning factory they have been summoned to protect.

INTRODUCTION

INTRODUCTION

England: its success in America is established. Though local in setting, its intrinsic universality cannot be questioned. It may perhaps be worth while to point out that the characteristics of the Hobson family, their practicality, hard-headedness, and self-centred aggressiveness, are not, as some critics have regarded them, individual to Hobson and inherited by his daughters, but the leading traits of the Lancashire character. The average Manchester man prides himself upon the possession of them. He has exalted them almost into a religion. In the Hobson family, too, with all their deliberate concentration on material advancement, one finds indication of the other Lancashire qualities, hidden under a rough exterior of humor and kindliness. Thus it is well to remember that in Hobson's Choice the curtain is raised not merely on the interior of a little Salford shoe shop but on an epitome of Lancashire life, or at any rate upon that great stratum defined in England as "the lower middle class," that class which Henry Horatio Hobson would proclaim as "the backbone of society."

HOBSON'S CHOICE

Act 1

ACT I

The scene represents the interior of HOBSON'S Boot Shop in Chapel Street, Salford. The shop windows and entrance from street occupy the right side. Opposite is the counter, with exhibits of boots and slippers, behind which the wall is filled with racks containing boot boxes. Cane chairs in front of counter. A door centre leads up two stairs to the house. Up stage by the counter is a trap leading to the cellar where work is done. There are no elaborate fittings, gas brackets in the window and walls. The business is prosperous, but to prosper in Salford in 1880 you did not require the elaborate accessories of a later day. A very important customer goes for fitting into HOBSON'S sitting-room through the centre door. The rank and file use the cane chairs in the shop which is dingy but businesslike. The windows exhibit little stock, and amongst what there is clogs figure prominently. Through the windows comes the bright light of noon.

Behind the counter are HOBSON'S two younger daughters, ALICE, who is twenty-three, and VICTORIA, who is twenty-one, and very pretty. They are in black, with neat black aprons. The centre door opens and MAGGIE enters. She is HOBSON'S eldest daughter, thirty.

ALICE. Oh, it's you. I hoped it was father going out.

MAGGIE. It isn't. [She crosses and takes her place down stage behind counter. VICKEY is up stage and ALICE in the middle.]

ALICE. He is late this morning.

MAGGIE. He got up late. [She sits behind counter and busies herself with an account book.]

VICKEY. Has he had breakfast yet, Maggie?

MAGGIE. Breakfast! With a Masons' meeting last night?

VICKEY. He'll need reviving.

ALICE. Then I wish he'd go and do it.

VICKEY. Are you expecting any one, Alice?

ALICE. Yes, I am, and you know I am, and I'll thank you both to go when he comes.

VICKEY. Well, I'll oblige you, Alice, if father's gone out first, only you know I can't leave the counter till he goes.

[ALBERT PROSSER enters from the street. He is twenty-six, nicely dressed, as the son of an established solicitor would be. He crosses to counter and raises his hat to ALICE.]

ALBERT. Good morning, Miss Alice.

ALICE. Good morning, Mr. Prosser. [She leans across counter.] Father's not gone out yet. He's late.

ALBERT. Oh! [He turns to go and is halfway to door, when MAGGIE rises.]

MAGGIE. What can we do for you, Mr. Prosser?

ALBERT [stopping]. Well, I can't say that I came in to buy anything, Miss Hobson.

MAGGIE. This is a shop, you know. We're not here to let people go out without buying.

ALBERT. Well, I'll just have a pair of boot laces, please.

MAGGIE. What size do you take in boots? [She comes round counter with a small mat in her hand.]

ALBERT. Eights. Does that matter to the laces?

MAGGIE [putting mat in front of a chair]. It matters to the boots. [She pushes him slightly.] Sit down, Mr. Prosser.

ALBERT [sitting]. Yes, but——

[MAGGIE is on her knees unlacing his boot.]

MAGGIE. It's time you had a new pair. These uppers are disgraceful for a professional man to wear. Number eights from the third rack, Vickey, please.

ALICE. Mr. Prosser didn't come in to buy boots, Maggie.

[VICKEY comes round to MAGGIE with box which she opens.]

MAGGIE. I wonder what does bring him in here so often.

ALBERT. I'm terrible hard on boot laces, Miss Hobson.

[VICKEY goes back, MAGGIE puts a new boot on him and laces it.]

MAGGIE. Do you get through a pair a day? You must be strong.

ALBERT. I keep a little stock of them. It's as well to be prepared for accidents.

MAGGIE. And now you'll have boots to go with the laces, Mr. Prosser. How does that feel?

ALBERT. Very comfortable.

MAGGIE. Try it standing up.

ALBERT [trying and walking a few steps]. Yes, that fits all right.

MAGGIE. I'll put the other on.

ALBERT. Oh, no, I really don't want to buy them.

MAGGIE [pushing him]. Sit down, Mr. Prosser. You can't go through the streets in odd boots.

ALBERT. What's the price of these?

MAGGIE. A pound.

ALBERT. A pound! I say——

MAGGIE. They're good boots and you don't need to buy a pair of laces to-day, because we give them in as discount. Braid laces, that is. Of course, if you want leather ones, you being so strong in the arm and breaking so many pairs, you can have them, only it's tuppence more.

ALBERT. These—these will do.

MAGGIE. Very well, I'll send the old pair home to you with the bill. [She has laced the second boot and rises, picking up the mat.]

ALBERT. Well, if any one had told me I was coming in here to spend a pound I'd have called him crazy.

MAGGIE. It's not wasted. Those boots will last. Good morning, Mr. Prosser. [She holds door open.]

ALBERT. Good morning. [He looks blankly at ALICE and goes out.]

ALICE. Maggie, we know you're a pushing saleswoman, but——

MAGGIE [returning to counter]. It'll teach him to keep out of here a bit. He's too much time on his hands.

ALICE. You know why he comes.

MAGGIE. I know it's time he paid a rent for coming. A pair of laces a day's not half enough. Coming here to make sheep's eyes at you. I'm sick of the sight of him.

ALICE. It's all very well for an old maid like you to talk, but if father won't have us go courting where else can Albert meet me except here when father's out?

MAGGIE. If he wants to marry you why doesn't he do it?

ALICE. Courting must come first.

MAGGIE. It needn't. [She picks up a slipper.] See that slipper with a paste buckle on to make it pretty? Courting's like that, my lass. All glitter and no use to nobody. [She replaces slipper.]

[HENRY HORATIO HOBSON enters from the house. He is fifty-five, successful, coarse, florid, and a parent of the period. His hat is on. It is one of those felt hats which are halfway to tall hats in shape. He has a heavy gold chain and masonic emblems on it. His clothes are bought to wear.]

HOBSON. Maggie, I'm just going out for a quarter of an hour.

MAGGIE. Yes, father. Don't be late for dinner. There's liver.

HOBSON. It's an hour off dinner-time.

MAGGIE. So that, if you stay more than an hour in the Moonraker's Inn, you'll be late for it.

HOBSON. Moonraker's? Who said——?

VICKEY. If your dinner's ruined, it'll be your own fault.

HOBSON. Well, I'll be eternally——

ALICE. Don't swear, father.

HOBSON [putting hat on counter]. No. I'll sit down instead. [He takes chair, straddling across it and facing them with his elbows on its back.] Listen to me, you three. I've come to conclusions about you. And I won't have it. Do you hear that? Interfering with my goings out and comings in. The idea! I've a mind to take measures with the lot of you.

MAGGIE. I expect Mr. Heeler's waiting for you in Moonraker's, father.

HOBSON. He can go on waiting. At present, I'm addressing a few remarks to the rebellious females of this house, and what I say will be listened to and heeded. I've noticed it coming on ever since your mother died. There's been a gradual increase of uppishness towards me.

VICKEY. Father, you'd have more time to talk after we've closed to-night.

HOBSON. I'm talking now, and you're listening. Providence has decreed that you should lack a mother's hand at the time when single girls grow bumptious and must have somebody to rule. But I'll tell you this, you'll none rule me.

VICKEY. I'm sure I'm not bumptious, father.

HOBSON. Yes, you are. You're pretty, but you're bumptious, and I hate bumptiousness like I hate a lawyer.

ALICE. If we take trouble to feed you it's not bumptious to ask you not to be late for your food.

VICKEY. Give and take, father.

HOBSON. I give and you take and it's going to end.

MAGGIE. How much a week do you give us?

HOBSON. That's neither here nor there. At moment I'm on uppishness, and I'm warning you your conduct towards your parent's got to change. But that's not all. That's private conduct, and now I pass to broader aspects and I speak of public conduct.

I've looked upon my household as they go about the streets and I've been disgusted. The fair name and fame of Hobson has been outraged by members of Hobson's family, and uppishness has done it.

VICKEY. I don't know what you're talking about.

HOBSON. Vickey, you're pretty, but you can lie like a gas meter. Who had new dresses on last week?

ALICE. I suppose you mean Vickey and me?

HOBSON. I do.

VICKEY. We shall dress as we like, father, and you can save your breath.

HOBSON. I'm not stopping in from my appointment for the purpose of saving my breath.

VICKEY. You like to see me in nice clothes.

HOBSON. I do. I like to see my daughters nice. That's why I pay Mr. Sudsbury, the draper, £10 a year a head to dress you proper. It pleases the eye and it's good for trade. But, I'll tell you, if some women could see themselves as men see them, they'd have a shock, and I'll have words with Sudsbury an' all, for letting you dress up like guys. I saw you and Alice out of the "Moonraker's" parlor on Thursday night and my friend Sam Minns——

ALICE. A publican.

HOBSON. Aye, a publican. As honest a man as God Almighty ever set behind a bar, my ladies. My friend, Sam Minns, asks me who you were. And well he might. You were going down Chapel Street with a hump added to nature behind you.

VICKEY [scandalized]. Father!

HOBSON. The hump was wagging, and you put your feet on pavement as if you'd got chilblains—aye, stiff neck above and weak knees below. It's immodest!

ALICE. It is not immodest, father. It's the fashion to wear bustles.

HOBSON. Then to hell with the fashion.

MAGGIE. Father, you are not in the "Moonraker's" now.

VICKEY. You should open your eyes to what other ladies wear.

HOBSON. If what I saw on you is any guide, I should do nowt of kind. I'm a decent-minded man. I'm Hobson. I'm British middle class and proud of it. I stand for common sense and sincerity. You're affected, which is bad sense and insincerity. You've overstepped nice dressing and you've tried grand dressing, which is the occupation of fools and such as have no brains. You forget the majesty of trade and the unparalleled virtues of the British Constitution which are all based on the sanity of the middle classes, combined with the diligence of the working classes. You're losing balance, and you're putting the things which don't matter in front of the things which do, and if you mean to be a factor in the world in Lancashire or a factor in the house of Hobson, you'll become sane.

VICKEY. Do you want us to dress like mill girls?

HOBSON. No. Nor like French Madams, neither. It's un-English, I say.

ALICE. We shall continue to dress fashionably, father.

HOBSON. Then I've a choice for you two. Vickey, you I'm talking to, and Alice. You'll become sane if you're going on living here. You'll control this uppishness that's growing on you. And if you don't, you get out of this, and exercise your gifts on some one else than me. You don't know when you're well off. But you'll learn it when I'm done with you. I'll choose a pair of husbands for you, my girls. That's what I'll do.

ALICE. Can't we choose husbands for ourselves?

HOBSON. I've been telling you for the last five minutes you're not even fit to choose dresses for yourselves.

MAGGIE. You're talking a lot to Vickey and Alice, father. Where do I come in?

HOBSON. You?

MAGGIE. If you're dealing husbands round, don't I get one?

HOBSON. Well, that's a good one! You with a husband!

MAGGIE. Why not?

HOBSON. Why not? I thought you'd sense enough to know. But if you want the brutal truth, you're past the marrying age. You're a proper old maid, Maggie, if ever there was one.

MAGGIE. I'm thirty.

HOBSON. Aye, thirty and shelved. Well, all the women can't get husbands. But you others, now. I've told you. I'll have less uppishness from you or else I'll shove you off my hands on to some other men. You can just choose which way you like. [He picks up hat and makes for door.]

MAGGIE. One o'clock dinner, father.

HOBSON. See here, Maggie, I set the hours at this house. It's one o'clock dinner because I say it is, and not because you do.

MAGGIE. Yes, father.

HOBSON. So long as that's clear I'll go. [He is by door.] Oh, no, I won't. Mrs. Hepworth's getting out of her carriage.

[He puts hat on counter again and opens door.

Enter MRS. HEPWORTH, an old lady with a curt manner and good clothes.]

Good morning, Mrs. Hepworth. What a lovely day. [He places chair.]

MRS. HEPWORTH [sitting]. Morning, Hobson. [She raises her skirt.] I've come about those boots you sent me home.

HOBSON [kneeling and fondling boot]. Yes, Mrs. Hepworth. They look very nice.

MRS. HEPWORTH. Get up, Hobson. You look ridiculous on the floor. Who made these boots?

HOBSON. We did. Our own make. [He scrambles up, controlling his feelings.]

MRS. HEPWORTH. Will you answer a plain question? Who made these boots?

HOBSON. They were made on the premises.

MRS. HEPWORTH [to MAGGIE]. Young woman, you seemed to have some sense when you served me. Can you answer me?

MAGGIE. I think so, but I'll make sure for you, Mrs. Hepworth. [She opens trap and calls.] Tubby! Willie HOBSON. You wish to see the identical workman, Madam?

MRS. HEPWORTH. I said so.

HOBSON. I am responsible for all work turned out here.

MRS. HEPWORTH. I never said you weren't.

[TUBBY WADLOW comes up trap. A white-haired little man with thin legs and a paunch, in dingy clothes with no collar and a colored cotton shirt. He has no coat on.]

TUBBY. Yes, Miss Maggie? [He stands half out of trap, not coming right up.]

MRS. HEPWORTH. Man, did you make these boots? [She advances one towards him.]

TUBBY. No, Ma'am.

MRS. HEPWORTH. Then who did? Am I to question every soul in the place before I find out?

TUBBY. They're Willie's making, those.

MRS. HEPWORTH. Then tell Willie I want him.

TUBBY. Certainly, Ma'am. [He goes down trap.]

MRS. HEPWORTH. Who's Willie?

HOBSON. Name of Mossop, Madam. But if there is anything wrong I assure you I'm capable of making the man suffer for it. I'll—— fellow, about thirty, not naturally stupid but stunted mentally by a brutalized childhood. He is the raw material of a charming man, but, at present, it requires a very keen eye to detect his potentialities. His clothes are an even poorer edition of TUBBY'S. He comes right up trap.]

[WILLIE MOSSOP comes up trap. He is a lanky

MRS. HEPWORTH. Are you Mossop?

WILLIE. Yes, mum.

MRS. HEPWORTH. You made these boots?

WILLIE [peering at them]. Yes, I made them last week.

MRS. HEPWORTH. Take that.

[WILLIE, bending down, rather expects "that" to be a blow. Then he raises his head and finds she is holding out a visiting card. He takes it.]

See what's on it?

WILLIE [bending over the card]. Writing?

MRS. HEPWORTH. Read it.

WILLIE. I'm trying. [His lips move as he tries to spell it out.]

MRS. HEPWORTH. Bless the man. Can't you read?

WILLIE. I do a bit. Only it's such funny print.

MRS. HEPWORTH. It's the usual italics of a visiting card, my man. Now listen to me. I heard about this shop, and what I heard brought me here for these boots. I'm particular about what I put on my feet.

HOBSON. I assure you it shall not occur again, Mrs. Hepworth.

MRS. HEPWORTH. What shan't?

HOBSON. I—I don't know.

MRS. HEPWORTH. Then hold your tongue. Mossop, I've tried every shop in Manchester and these are the best-made pair of boots I've ever had. Now, you'll make my boots in future. You hear that, Hobson?

HOBSON. Yes, Madam, of course he shall.

MRS. HEPWORTH. You'll keep that card, Mossop, and you won't dare leave here to go to another shop without letting me know where you are.

HOBSON. Oh, he won't make a change.

MRS. HEPWORTH. How do you know? The man's a treasure and I expect you underpay him.

HOBSON. That'll do, Willie. You can go.

WILLIE. Yes, sir.

[He dives down trap. HOBSON closes it.]

MRS. HEPWORTH. He's like a rabbit. [She rises.]

MAGGIE. Can I take your order for another pair of boots, Mrs. Hepworth?

MRS. HEPWORTH. Not yet, young woman. But I shall send my daughters here. And, mind you, that man's to make the boots.

MAGGIE. Certainly, Mrs. Hepworth.

MRS. HEPWORTH. Good morning.

[HOBSON opens door.]

HOBSON. Good morning, Mrs. Hepworth. Very glad to have the honor of serving you, Madam.

[She goes out. HOBSON closes door.]

I wish some people would mind their own business. What does she want to praise a workman to his face for?

MAGGIE. I suppose he deserved it.

HOBSON. Deserved be blowed! Making them up-pish. That's what it is. Last time she puts her foot in my shop, I give you my word.

MAGGIE. Don't be silly, father.

HOBSON. I'll show her. Thinks she owns the earth because she lives at Hope Hall.

[Enter from street JIM HEELER, who is a grocer, and HOBSON's boon companion.]

JIM [looking down street as he enters]. That's a bit of a startler.

HOBSON [swinging round]. Eh? Oh, morning, Jim.

JIM. You're doing a good class trade if the carriage folk come to you, Hobson.

HOBSON. What?

JIM. Wasn't that Mrs. Hepworth?

HOBSON. Oh, yes. Mrs. Hepworth's an old and valued customer of mine.

JIM. It's funny you deal with Hope Hall and never mentioned it.

HOBSON. Why, I've made boots for her and all her circle for . . . how long, Maggie? Oh, I dunno.

JIM. You kept it dark. Well, aren't you coming round yonder?

HOBSON [reaching for his hat]. Yes. That is, no.

JIM. Are you ill?

HOBSON. No. Get away, you girls. I'll look after the shop. I want to talk to Mr. Heeler.

JIM. Well, can't you talk in the "Moonraker's?"

[The girls go up centre stairs to house.]

HOBSON. Yes, with Sam Minns, and Denton and Sudsbury there.

JIM. It's private, then. What's the trouble, Henry?

[HOBSON puts chair for JIM. They sit.]

HOBSON. They're the trouble. [Indicates door to house.] Do your daughters worry you, Jim?

JIM. Nay, they mostly do as I bid them, and the missus does the leathering if they don't.

HOBSON. Ah, Jim, a wife's a handy thing, and you don't know it proper till she's taken from you. I felt grateful for the quiet when my Mary fell on rest, but I can see my mistake now. I used to think I was hard put to it to fend her off when she wanted summat out of me, but the dominion of one woman is Paradise to the dominion of three.

JIM. It sounds a sad case, Henry.

HOBSON. I'm a talkative man by nature, Jim. You know that.

JIM. You're an orator, Henry. I doubt John Bright himself is better gifted of the gab than you.

HOBSON. Nay, that's putting it a bit too strong. A good case needs no flattery.

JIM. Well, you're the best debater in the "Moon-raker's" parlor.

HOBSON. And that's no more than truth. Yes, Jim, in the estimation of my fellowmen, I give forth words of weight. In the eyes of my daughters I'm a windbag.

JIM. Nay. Never!

HOBSON. I am. They scorn my wisdom, Jim. They answer back. I'm landed in a hole—a great and undignified hole. My own daughters have got the upper hand of me.

JIM. Women are worse than men for getting above themselves.

HOBSON. A woman's foolishness begins where man's leaves off.

JIM. They want a firm hand, Henry.

HOBSON. I've lifted up my voice and roared at them.

JIM. Beware of roaring at women, Henry. Roaring is mainly hollow sound. It's like trying to defeat an army with banging drums instead of cold steel. And it's steel in a man's character that subdues the women.

HOBSON. I've tried all ways, and I'm fair moithered. I dunno what to do.

JIM. Then you quit roaring at 'em and get 'em wed.

HOBSON. I've thought of that. Trouble is to find the man.

JIM. Men's common enough. Are you looking for angels in breeches?

HOBSON. I'd like my daughters to wed temperance young men, Jim.

JIM. You keep your ambitions within reasonable limits, Henry. You've three daughters to find husbands for.

HOBSON. Two, Jim, two.

JIM. Two?

HOBSON. Vickey and Alice are mostly window dressing in the shop. But Maggie's too useful to part with. And she's a bit on the ripe side for marrying, is our Maggie.

JIM. I've seen 'em do it at double her age. Still, leaving her out, you've two.

HOBSON. One'll do for a start, Jim. It's a thing I've noticed about wenches. Get one wedding in a family and it goes through the lot like measles.

JIM. Well, you want a man, and you want him temperance. It'll cost you a bit, you know.

HOBSON. Eh? Oh, I'll get my hand down for the wedding all right.

JIM. A warm man like you 'ull have to do more than that. There's things called settlements.

HOBSON. Settlements?

JIM. Aye. You've to bait your hook to catch fish, Henry.

HOBSON. Then I'll none go fishing.

JIM. But you said——

HOBSON. I've changed my mind. I'd a fancy for a bit of peace, but there's luxuries a man can buy too dear. Settlements indeed!

JIM. I had a man in mind.

HOBSON. You keep him there, Jim. I'll rub along and chance it. Settlements.

JIM. You save their keep.

HOBSON. They work for that. And they're none of them big eaters.

JIM. And their wages.

HOBSON. Wages? Do you think I pay wages to my own daughters? I'm not a fool.

JIM. Then it's all off?

HOBSON. From the moment that you breathed the word settlements it was dead off, Jim. Let's go to the "Moonraker's" and forget there's such a thing as women in the world. [He takes up hat and opens centre door.] Shop! Shop!

[MAGGIE enters from living rooms.]

I'm going out, Maggie.

MAGGIE [she remains by door]. Dinner's at one, remember.

HOBSON. Dinner will be when I come in for it. I'm master here.

MAGGIE. Yes, father. One o'clock.

HOBSON. Come along, Jim.

[JIM and HOBSON go out to street. MAGGIE turns to speak inside centre door.]

MAGGIE. Dinner at half-past one, girls. We'll give him half an hour. [She closes door and crosses to trap, which she raises.] Willie, come here.

[In a moment WILLIE appears, and stops half-way up.]

WILLIE. Yes, Miss Maggie?

MAGGIE. Come up, and put the trap down, I want to talk to you.

[He comes, reluctantly.]

WILLIE. We're very busy in the cellar.

MAGGIE. Show me your hands, Willie.

WILLIE. They're dirty. [He holds them out hesitatingly.]

MAGGIE. Yes, they're dirty, but they're clever. They can shape the leather like no other man's that ever came into the shop. Who taught you, Willie? [She retains his hands.]

WILLIE. Why, Miss Maggie, I learnt my trade here.

MAGGIE. Hobson's never taught you to make boots the way you do.

WILLIE. I've had no other teacher.

MAGGIE [dropping his hands]. And needed none. You're a natural born genius at making boots. It's a pity you're a natural fool at all else.

WILLIE. I'm not much good at 'owt but leather, and that's a fact.

MAGGIE. When are you going to leave Hobson's?

WILLIE. Leave Hobson's? I—I thought I gave satisfaction.

MAGGIE. Don't you want to leave?

WILLIE. Not me. I've been at Hobson's all my life and I'm not for leaving till I'm made.

MAGGIE. I said you were a fool.

WILLIE. Then I'm a loyal fool.

MAGGIE. Don't you want to get on, Will Mos-sop? You heard what Mrs. Hepworth said. You know the wages you get and you know the wages a bootmaker like you could get in one of the big shops in Manchester.

WILLIE. Nay, I'd be feared to go in them fine places.

MAGGIE. What keeps you here? Is it the—the people?

WILLIE. I dunno what it is. I'm used to being here.

MAGGIE. Do you know what keeps this business on its legs? Two things: one's the good boots you make that sell themselves, the other's the bad boots other people make and I sell. We're a pair, Will Mossop.

WILLIE. You're a wonder in the shop, Miss Maggie.

MAGGIE. And you're a marvel in the workshop. Well?

WILLIE. Well, what?

MAGGIE. It seems to me to point one way.

WILLIE. What way is that?

MAGGIE. You're leaving me to do the work, my lad.

WILLIE. I'll be getting back to my stool, Miss Maggie.

MAGGIE. You'll go back when I've done with you. I've watched you for a long time and everything I've seen, I've liked. I think you'll do for me.

WILLIE. What way, Miss Maggie?

MAGGIE. Will Mossop, you're my man. Six months I've counted on you and it's got to come out some time.

WILLIE. But I never——

MAGGIE. I know you never, or it 'ud not be left to me to do the job like this.

WILLIE. I'll—I'll sit down. [He sits, mopping his brow.] I'm feeling queer-like. What dost want me for?

MAGGIE. To invest in. You're a business proposition in the shape of a man.

WILLIE. I've got no head for business at all.

MAGGIE. But I have. My brain and your hands 'ull make a working partnership.

WILLIE [getting up, relieved]. Partnership! Oh, that's a different thing. I thought you were axing me to wed you.

MAGGIE. I am.

WILLIE. Well, by gum. And you the master's daughter.

MAGGIE. Maybe that's why, Will Mossop. Maybe I've had enough of father, and you're as different from him as any man I know.

WILLIE. It's a bit awkward-like.

MAGGIE. And you don't help me any, lad. What's awkward about it?

WILLIE. You talking to me like this.

MAGGIE. I'll tell you something, Will. It's a poor sort of woman who'll stay lazy when she sees her best chance slipping from her. A Salford life's too near the bone to lose things through the fear of speaking out.

WILLIE. I'm your best chance?

MAGGIE. You are that, Will.

WILLIE. Well, by gum. I never thought of this.

MAGGIE. Think of it now.

WILLIE. I am doing. Only the blow's a bit too sudden to think very clear. I've a great respect for you, Miss Maggie. You've a shapely body, and you're a masterpiece at selling in the shop, but when it comes to marrying, I'm bound to tell you that I'm none in love with you.

MAGGIE. Wait till you're asked. I want your hand in mine and your word for it that you'll go through life with me for the best we can get out of it.

WILLIE. We'd not get much without there's love between us, lass.

MAGGIE. I've got the love all right.

WILLIE. Well, I've not, and that's honest.

MAGGIE. We'll get along without.

WILLIE. You're kind of set on this. It's a puzzle to me all ways. What 'ud your father say?

MAGGIE. He'll say a lot, and he can say it. It'll make no difference to me.

WILLIE. Much better not upset him. It's not worth while.

MAGGIE. I'm judge of that. You're going to wed me, Will.

WILLIE. Oh, nay, I'm not. Really I can't do that, Maggie. I can see that I'm disturbing your arrangements like, but I'll be obliged if you'll put this notion from you.

MAGGIE. When I make arrangements, my lad, they're not made for upsetting.

WILLIE. What makes it so desperate awkward is that I'm tokened.

MAGGIE. You're what?

WILLIE. I'm tokened to Ada Figgins.

MAGGIE. Then you'll let loose and quick. Who's Ada Figgins? Do I know her?

WILLIE. I'm the lodger at her mother's.

MAGGIE. The scheming hussy. It's not that sandy girl who brings your dinner?

WILLIE. She's golden-haired is Ada. Aye, she'll be here soon.

MAGGIE. And so shall I. I'll talk to Ada. I've seen her and I know the breed. Ada's the helpless sort.

WILLIE. She needs protecting.

MAGGIE. That's how she got you, was it? Yes, I can see her clinging round your neck until you fanced you were strong. But I'll tell you this, my lad, it's a desperate poor kind of a woman that'll look for protection to the likes of you.

WILLIE. Ada does.

MAGGIE. And that gives me the weight of her. She's born to meekness, Ada is. You wed her, and you'll be an eighteen shilling a week bootmaker all the days of your life. You'll be a slave, and a contented slave.

WILLIE. I'm not ambitious that I know of.

MAGGIE. No. But you're going to be. I'll see to that. I've got my work cut out, but there's the makings of a man about you.

WILLIE. I wish you'd leave me alone.

MAGGIE. So does the fly when the spider catches him. You're my man, Willie Mossop.

WILLIE. Aye, so you say. Ada would tell another story, though.

[ADA FIGGINS enters from street. She is not ridiculous, but a weak, poor-blooded, poor-spirited girl of twenty, in clogs and shawl, with WILLIE'S dinner in a basin carried in a blue handkerchief. She crosses to him and gives him the basin.]

ADA. There's your dinner, Will.

WILLIE. Thank you, Ada.

[She turns to go, and finds MAGGIE in her way.]

MAGGIE. I want a word with you. You're treading on my foot, young woman.

ADA. Me, Miss Hobson? [She looks stupidly at MAGGIE's feet.]

MAGGIE. What's this with you and him?

ADA [gushing]. Oh, Miss 'Obson, it is good of you to take notice like that.

WILLIE. Ada, she——

MAGGIE. You hold your hush. This is for me and her to settle. Take a fair look at him, Ada.

ADA. At Will?

MAGGIE [nodding]. Not much there for two women to fall out over, is there?

ADA. Maybe he's not so much to look at, but you should hear him play.

MAGGIE. Play? Are you a musician, Will?

WILLIE. I play the Jew's harp.

MAGGIE. That's what you see in him, is it? A gawky fellow that plays the Jew's harp?

ADA. I see the lad I love, Miss 'Obson.

MAGGIE. It's a funny thing, but I can say the same.

ADA. You!

WILLIE. That's what I've been trying to tell you, Ada, and—and, by gum, she'll have me from you if you don't be careful.

MAGGIE. So we're quits so far, Ada.

ADA. You'll pardon me. You've spoke too late. Will and me's tokened.

MAGGIE. That's the past. It's the future that I'm looking to. What's your idea for that?

ADA. You mind your own business, Miss 'Obson. Will Mossop's no concern of thine.

WILLIE. That's what I try to tell her myself, only she will have it it's no use.

MAGGIE. Not an atom. I've asked for your idea of Willie's future. If it's a likelier one than mine, I'll give you best and you can have the lad.

ADA. I'm trusting him to make the future right.

MAGGIE. It's as bad as I thought it was. Willie, you wed me.

ADA. It's daylight robbery.

WILLIE. Aren't you going to put up a better fight for me than that, Ada? You're fair giving me to her.

MAGGIE. Will Mossop, you take your orders from me in this shop. I've told you you'll wed me.

WILLIE. Seems like there's no escape.

ADA. Wait while I get you to home, my lad. I'll set my mother on to you.

MAGGIE. Oh, so it's her mother made this match?

WILLIE. She had above a bit to do with it.

MAGGIE. I've got no mother, Will.

WILLIE. You need none, neither.

MAGGIE. Well, can I sell you a pair of clogs, Miss Figgins?

ADA. No. Nor anything else.

MAGGIE. Then you've no business here, have you?

ADA. Will, are you going to see me ordered out?

WILLIE. It's her shop, Ada.

ADA. You mean I'm to go like this?

WILLIE. She means it.

ADA. It's cruel hard.

MAGGIE. When it comes to a parting, it's best to part sudden and no whimpering about it.

ADA. I'm not whimpering, and I'm not parting, neither. But he'll whimper to-night when my mother sets about him.

MAGGIE. That'll do. [She opens door.]

ADA. Will Mossop, you'll come home to trouble to-night. I'm telling you! [She goes.]

WILLIE. I'd really rather wed Ada, Maggie, if it's all same to you.

MAGGIE. Why? Because of her mother?

WILLIE. She's a terrible rough 'side to her tongue, has Mrs. Figgins.

MAGGIE. Are you afraid of her?

WILLIE [hesitates, then says]. Yes.

MAGGIE. You needn't be.

WILLIE. Yes, but you don't know her. She'll jaw me till I'm black in the face when I go home to-night.

MAGGIE. You won't go home to-night.

WILLIE. Not go!

MAGGIE. You've done with lodging there. You'll go to Tubby Wadlow's when you knock off work and Tubby 'ull go round to Mrs. Figgins for your things.

WILLIE. And I'm not to go back there never no more?

MAGGIE. No.

WILLIE. It's like an 'appy dream. Eh, Maggie, you do manage things.

MAGGIE. And while Tubby's there you can go round and see about putting the banns up for us two.

WILLIE. Banns! Oh, but I'm hardly used to the idea yet.

MAGGIE. You'll have three weeks to get used to it in. Now you can kiss me, Will.

WILLIE. That's forcing things a bit, and all. It's like saying I agree to everything, a kiss is.

MAGGIE. Yes.

WILLIE. And I don't agree yet. I'm——

MAGGIE. Come along.

[ALICE and VICKEY enter from living apartments.]

Do what I tell you, Will.

WILLIE. Now? With them here?

MAGGIE. Yes.

WILLIE [pause]. I couldn't. [He dives for trap, runs down, and closes it.]

ALICE. What's the matter with Willie?

MAGGIE. He's a bit upset because I've told him he's to marry me. Is dinner cooking nicely?

ALICE. You're going to marry Willie Mossop! Willie Mossop!

VICKEY. You've kept it quiet, Maggie.

MAGGIE. You know about it pretty near as soon as Willie does himself.

VICKEY. Well, I don't know!

ALICE. I know, and if you're afraid to speak your thoughts, I'm not. Look here, Maggie, what you do touches us, and you're mistaken if you think I'll own Willie Mossop for my brother-in-law.

MAGGIE. Is there supposed to be some disgrace in him?

ALICE. You ask father if there's disgrace. And look at me. I'd hopes of Albert Prosser till this happened.

MAGGIE. You'll marry Albert Prosser when he's able, and that'll be when he starts spending less on laundry bills and hair cream.

[HOBSON enters from the street.]

HOBSON. Well, what about that dinner?

MAGGIE. It'll be ready in ten minutes.

HOBSON. You said one o'clock.

MAGGIE. Yes, father. One for half-past. If you'll wash your hands it'll be ready as soon as you are.

HOBSON. I won't wash my hands. I don't hold with such finicking ways, and well you know it.

VICKEY. Father, have you heard the news about our Maggie?

HOBSON. News? There is no news. It's the same old tale. Uppishness. You'd keep a starving man from the meat he earns in the sweat of his brow, would you? I'll put you in your places. I'll——

MAGGIE. Don't lose your temper, father. You'll maybe need it soon when Vickey speaks.

HOBSON. What's Vickey been doing?

VICKEY. Nothing. It's about Will Mossop, father.

HOBSON. Will?

ALICE. Yes. What's your opinion of Will?

HOBSON. A decent lad. I've nowt against him that I know of.

ALICE. Would you like him in the family?

HOBSON. Whose family?

VICKEY. Yours.

MAGGIE. I'm going to marry Willie, father. That's what all the fuss is about.

HOBSON. Marry—you—Mossop!

MAGGIE. You thought me past the marrying age. I'm not. That's all.

HOBSON. Didn't you hear me say I'd do the choosing when it came to a question of husbands?

MAGGIE. You said I was too old to get a husband.

HOBSON. You are. You all are.

VICKEY. Father!

HOBSON. And if you're not, it makes no matter. I'll have no husbands here.

ALICE. But you said——

HOBSON. I've changed my mind. I've learnt some things since then. There's a lot too much expected of a father nowadays. There'll be no weddings here.

ALICE. Oh, father!

HOBSON. Go and get my dinner served and talk less. Go on now. I'm not in right temper to be crossed.

[He drives ALICE and VICKEY before him. They go out centre. But MAGGIE stands in his way as he follows and she closes the door. She looks at him from the stair.]

MAGGIE. You and I 'ull be straight with one another, father. I'm not a fool and you're not a fool, and things may as well be put in their places as left untidy.

HOBSON. I tell you my mind's made up. You can't have Willie Mossop. Why, lass, his father was a workhouse brat. A come by chance.

MAGGIE. It's news to me we're snobs in Salford. I have Willie Mossop. I've to settle my life's course, and a good course, too, so think on.

HOBSON. I'd be the laughing-stock of the place if I allowed it. I won't have it, Maggie. It's hardly decent at your time of life.

MAGGIE. I'm thirty and I'm marrying Willie Mossop. And now I'll tell you my terms.

HOBSON. You're in a nice position to state terms, my lass.

MAGGIE. You will pay my man, Will Mossop, the same wages as before. And as for me, I've given you the better part of twenty years of work without wages. I'll work eight hours a day in future and you will pay me fifteen shillings by the week.

HOBSON. Do you think I'm made of brass?

MAGGIE. You'll soon be made of less than you are if you let Willie go. And if Willie goes, I go. That's what you've got to face.

HOBSON. I might face it, Maggie. Shop hands are cheap.

MAGGIE. Cheap ones are cheap. The sort you'd have to watch all day, and you'd feel happy helping them to tie up parcels and sell laces with Sudsbury and Heeler and Minns supping their ale without you. I'm value to you, so's my man; and you can boast it at the "Moonraker's" that your daughter Maggie's made the strangest, finest match a woman's made this fifty year. And you can put your hand in your pocket and do what I propose.

HOBSON. I'll show you what I propose, Maggie. [He lifts trap and calls.] Will Mossop! [He unbuckles belt.] I cannot leather you, my lass. You're female, and exempt, but I can leather him. Come up, Will Mossop.

[WILL comes up trap.]

You've taken up with my Maggie, I hear. [He conceals strap.]

WILLIE. Nay, I'm not. She's done the taking up.

HOBSON. Well, Willie, either way, you've fallen on misfortune. Love's led you astray, and I feel bound to put you right.

WILLIE. Maggie, what's this?

MAGGIE. I'm watching you, my lad.

HOBSON. Mind, Willie, you can keep your job. I don't bear malice, but we must beat the love from your body, and every morning you come here to work with love still sitting in you, you'll get a leathering.

WILLIE. You'll not beat love in me. You're making a great mistake, Mr. Hobson, and——

HOBSON. You'll put aside your weakness for my Maggie if you've a liking for a sound skin. You'll waste a gradely lot of brass at chemist's if I am at you for a week with this. [He swings the strap.]

WILLIE. I'm none wanting thy Maggie, it's her that's after me, but I'll tell you this, Mr. Hobson, if you touch me with that belt, I'll take her quick, aye, and stick to her like glue.

HOBSON. There's nobbut one answer to that kind of talk, my lad. [He strikes with belt.]

WILLIE. And I've nobbut one answer back. Maggie, I've none kissed you yet. I shirked before. But, by gum, I'll kiss you now, and take you and hold you. And if Mr. Hobson raises up that strap again, I'll do more. I'll walk straight out of shop with thee and us two 'ull set up for ourselves.

MAGGIE. Willie! I knew you had it in you, lad. [She kisses him.]

[HOBSON stands in amazed indecision.]

Curtain

ACT II

ACT II

SCENE I

A month later. The shop as Act I. It is about mid-day. ALICE is at MAGGIE'S place by the desk and VICKEY is also behind the counter. The trap is open and TUBBY leans against the counter by ALICE.

ALICE. I'm sure I don't know what to tell you to do, Tubby.

TUBBY. There's nothing in at all to start on, Miss Alice. We're worked up.

ALICE. Well, father's out and I can't help you.

TUBBY. He'll play old Harry if he comes in and finds us doing nowt in the workroom.

VICKEY. Then do something. We're not stopping you.

TUBBY. You're not telling me neither. And I'm supposed to take my orders from the shop.

ALICE. I don't know what to tell you. Nobody seems to want any boots made.

TUBBY. The high-class trade has dropped like a stone this last month. Of course we can go on making clogs for stock if you like.

ALICE. Then you'd better.

TUBBY. You know what's got by selling clogs won't pay the rent, let alone wages, but if clogs are your orders, Miss Alice—— [He moves towards trap.]

ALICE. You suggested it.

TUBBY. I made the remark. But I'm not a rash man, and I'm not going to be responsible to the master with his temper so nowty and all since Miss Maggie went.

ALICE. Oh, dear! What would Miss Maggie have told you to do?

TUBBY. I couldn't tell you that, Miss, I'm sure. I don't recollect things being as slack as this in her time.

VICKEY. You don't help us much for an intelligent foreman.

TUBBY. When you've told me what to do, I'll use my intelligence and see it's done properly.

ALICE. Then go and make clogs.

TUBBY. Them's your orders?

ALICE. Yes.

TUBBY. Thank you, Miss Alice.

[TUBBY goes down trap and closes it.]

ALICE. I wonder if I've done right.

VICKEY. That's your look-out.

ALICE. I don't care. It's father's place to be here to tell them what to do.

VICKEY. Maggie used to manage without him.

ALICE. Oh, yes. Go on. I know as well as you do that it's father's fault. He ought to look after his business himself instead of wasting more time than ever in the "Moonraker's," but you needn't be snappy with me about it.

ALICE. I'm not snappy in myself. It's these figures. I can't get them right. What's 17 and 25?

VICKEY [promptly]. Fifty-two, of course.

ALICE. Well, it doesn't balance right. Oh, I wish I was married and out of it.

VICKEY. Same here.

ALICE. You!

VICKEY. You needn't think you're the only one.

ALICE. Well, you're sly, Vickey Hobson. You've kept it to yourself.

VICKEY. It's just as well now that I did. Maggie's spoilt our chances forever. Nobody's fretting to get Willie Mossop for a brother-in-law.

[MAGGIE enters, followed by WILL and FREDDY

BEENSTOCK. MAGGIE and WILL are actually about to be married, but their dress does not specially indicate it. They are not in their older clothes, and that is all. FREDDY is smarter than either, though only in his everyday dress. He is not at all a blood, but the respectable son of a respectable tradesman, and his appearance is such as to justify his attractiveness in VICKEY's eyes.]

ALICE. Maggie, you here!

MAGGIE. I thought we'd just drop in. Vickey, what's this that Mr. Beenstock's telling me about you and him?

VICKEY [sullenly]. If he's told you I suppose you know.

FREDDY [smilingly]. She got it out of me, Vickey.

VICKEY. I don't know that it's any business of yours, Maggie. [She comes round counter.]

MAGGIE. You'll never get no farther with it by yourselves from what I hear of father's carryings-on.

VICKEY. That's your fault. Yours and his. [Indicating WILLIE, who is trying to efface himself at the back.]

MAGGIE [sharply]. Leave that alone. I'm here to help you if you'll have my help.

[VICKEY would say "No" but——]

FREDDY. It's very good of you, Miss Maggie, I must say. Your father has turned very awkward.

MAGGIE. I reckon he'll change. Has your young man been in yet this morning, Alice?

ALICE [indignantly]. My young——

MAGGIE. Albert Prosser.

ALICE. No.

MAGGIE. Do you expect him?

ALICE. He's not been here so often since you and Willie Mossop got——

MAGGIE [sharply]. Since when?

ALICE. Since you made him buy that pair of boots he didn't want.

MAGGIE. I see. He didn't like paying for taking his pleasure in our shop. Well, if he's not expected, somebody must go for him. Prosser, Pilkington & Prosser, Solicitors of Bexley Square. That's right, isn't it?

ALICE. Yes. Albert's and Prosser.

MAGGIE. Aye? Quite a big man in his way. Then, will you go and fetch him, Mr. Beenstock? Tell him to bring the paper with him.

VICKEY. You're ordering folk about a bit.

MAGGIE. I'm used to it.

FREDDY. It's all right, Vickey.

ALICE. Is it? Suppose father comes in and finds Albert and Freddy here?

MAGGIE. He won't.

ALICE. He's beyond his time already.

MAGGIE. I know. You must have worried father very badly since I went, Alice.

ALICE. Why?

MAGGIE. Tell them, Mr. Beenstock.

FREDDY. Well, the fact is, Mr. Hobson won't come because he's at our place just now.

VICKEY. At your corn warehouse? What's father doing there?

FREDDY. He's—he's sleeping, Vickey.

ALICE. Sleeping?

FREDDY. You see, we've a cellar trap in our place that opens in the pavement and your father—wasn't looking very carefully where he was going and he fell into it.

VICKEY. Fell? Is father hurt?

FREDDY. He's snoring very loudly, but he isn't hurt. He fell soft on some bags.

MAGGIE. Now you can go for Albert Prosser.

ALICE. Is that all we're to be told?

MAGGIE. It's all there is to tell till Freddy's seen his solicitor.

FREDDY. I'll not be long.

MAGGIE. Don't. I've a job here for you when you get back.

[FREDDY goes.]

ALICE. I don't know what you're aiming at, Maggie, but——

MAGGIE. The difference between us is that I do. I always did.

VICKEY [indicating WILLIE]. It's a queer thing you aimed at.

MAGGIE [taking WILL'S arm]. I've done uncommon well myself, and I've come here to put things straight for you. Father told you to get married and you don't shape.

ALICE. He changed his mind.

MAGGIE. I don't allow for folks to change their minds. He made his choice. He said get married, and you're going to.

VICKEY. You haven't made it easier for us, you know.

MAGGIE. Meaning Willie?

WILLIE. It wasn't my fault, Miss Vickey, really it wasn't.

MAGGIE. You call her Vickey, Will.

VICKEY. No, he doesn't.

MAGGIE. He's in the family or going to be. And I'll tell you this. If you want your Freddy, and if you want your Albert, you'll be respectful to my Willie.

ALICE. Willie Mossop was our boot hand.

MAGGIE. He was, and you'll let bygones be bygones. He's as good as you are now, and better.

WILLIE. Nay, come, Maggie——

MAGGIE. Better, I say. They're shop assistants. You're your own master, aren't you?

WILLIE. I've got my name wrote up on the windows, but I dunno so much about being master.

MAGGIE [producing card]. That's his business card. William Mossop, Practical Boot and Shoe Maker, 39a Oldfield Road, Salford. William Mossop, Master Bootmaker! That's the man you're privileged to call by his Christian name. Aye, and I'll do more for you than let you call him in his name. You can both of you kiss him for your brother-in-law to be.

WILLIE. Nay, Maggie, I'm no great hand at kissing.

MAGGIE [dryly]. I've noticed that. A bit of practice will do you no harm. Come along, Vickey.

ALICE [interposing]. But, Maggie . . . a shop of your own——

MAGGIE [grimly]. I'm waiting, Vickey.

WILLIE. I don't see that you ought to drive her to it, Maggie.

MAGGIE. You hold your hush.

ALICE. But however did you manage it? Where did the capital come from?

MAGGIE. It came. Will, stand still. She's making up her mind to it.

WILLIE. I'd just as lief not put her to the trouble.

MAGGIE. You'll take your proper place in this family, my lad, trouble or no trouble.

VICKEY. I don't see why you should always get your way.

MAGGIE. It's just a habit. Come along, now, Vickey, I've a lot to do to-day and you're holding everything back.

VICKEY. It's under protest.

MAGGIE. Protest, but kiss.

[VICKEY kisses WILL, who finds he rather likes it.]

Your turn now, Alice.

ALICE. I'll do it if you'll help me with these books, Maggie.

MAGGIE. Books? Father's put you in my place?

ALICE. Yes.

MAGGIE. Then he must take the consequences. Your books aren't my affair.

ALICE. I think you might help me, Maggie.

MAGGIE. I'm surprised at you, Alice, I really am, after what you've just been told. Exposing your books to a rival shop. You ought to know better. Will's waiting. And you're to kiss him hearty now.

ALICE. Very well. [She kisses WILL.]

WILLIE. There's more in kissing nice young women than I thought.

MAGGIE. Don't get too fond of it, my lad.

ALICE. Well, I hope you're satisfied, Maggie. You've got your way again, and now perhaps you'll tell us if there's anything you want in this shop.

MAGGIE. Eh? Are you trying to sell me something?

ALICE. I'm asking you, what's your business here?

MAGGIE. I've told you once. Will and me's taking a day off to put you in the way of getting wed.

VICKEY. It looks like things are slow at your new shop if you can walk round in your best clothes on a working day.

WILLIE. It's not a working day with us. It's a wedding-day.

ALICE. You've been married this morning!

MAGGIE. Not us. I'll have my sisters there when I get wed. It's at one o'clock at St. Philips's.

VICKEY. But we can't leave the shop to come.

MAGGIE. Why not? Is trade so brisk?

VICKEY. No, but——

MAGGIE. Not so much high-class trade doing with you, eh?

ALICE. I don't see how you knew.

MAGGIE. I'm good at guessing. You'll not miss owt by coming with us to church, and we'll expect you at home to-night for a wedding-spread.

VICKEY. It's asking us to approve.

MAGGIE. You have approved. You've kissed the bridegroom and you'll go along with us. Father's safe where he is.

ALICE. And the shop?

MAGGIE. Tubby can see to the shop. And that reminds me. You can sell me something. There are some rings in that drawer there, Vickey.

VICKEY. Brass rings?

MAGGIE. Yes. I want one. That's the size.
[She holds up her wedding-ring finger.]

VICKEY. That! But you're not taking it for——

[VICKEY puts box of rings on counter.]

MAGGIE. Yes, I am. Will and me aren't throwing money round, but we can pay our way. There's fourpence for the ring. Gather it up, Vickey. [Putting down money and trying on rings.]

ALICE. Wedded with a brass ring.

MAGGIE. This one will do. It's a nice fit. Alice, you haven't entered that sale in your book. No wonder you're worried with the accounts if that's the way you see to them. [She puts ring in her bag.]

ALICE. I'm a bit too much astonished at you to think about accounts. A ring out of stock!

MAGGIE. They're always out of some one's stock.

VICKEY. Well, I'd think shame to myself to be married with a ring like that.

MAGGIE. When folks can't afford the best they have to do without.

VICKEY. I'll take good care I never go without.

MAGGIE. Semi-detached for you, I suppose, and a houseful of new furniture.

ALICE. Haven't you furnished?

MAGGIE. We've made a start at the Flat Iron Market.

ALICE. I'd stay single sooner than have other people's cast-off sticks in my house. Where's your pride gone to, Maggie?

MAGGIE. I'm not getting wed myself to help the furnishing trade along. I suppose you'd turn your nose up at second-hand stuff, too, Vickey?

VICKEY. I'll start properly or not at all.

MAGGIE. Then you'll neither of you have any objections to my clearing out the lumber-room upstairs. We brought a hand-cart round with us.

[WILL takes his coat off.]

VICKEY. You made sure of things.

MAGGIE. Yes. Get upstairs, Will. I told you what to bring.

ALICE. Wait a bit.

MAGGIE. Go on.

[WILL goes into the house.]

ALICE. Let me tell you if you claim the furniture from your old bedroom, that it's my room now, and you'll not budge a stick of it.

MAGGIE. I expected you'd promote yourself, Alice. But I said lumber-room. There's a two-three broken chairs in the attic and a sofa with the springs all gone. You'll not tell me they're of any use to you.

ALICE. Nor to you, neither.

MAGGIE. Will's handy with his fingers. He'll put in this afternoon mending them. They'll be secure against you come to sit on them at supper-time to-night.

VICKEY. And that's the way you're going to live! With cast-off furniture.

MAGGIE. Aye. In two cellars in Oldfield Road.

ALICE [screaming]. A cellar!

MAGGIE. Two of 'em, Alice. One to live and work in and the other to sleep in.

ALICE. Well, it ud not suit me.

VICKEY. Nor me.

MAGGIE. It suits me fine. And when me and Will are richer than the lot of you together, it'll be a grand satisfaction to look back and think about how we were when we began.

[WILL appears at centre door with two crippled chairs and begins to cross the shop.]

VICKEY. Just a minute, Will. [She examines the chairs.] These chairs are not so bad.

MAGGIE. You can sit on one to-night, and see.

VICKEY. You know, mended up, those chairs would do very well for my kitchen when I'm wed.

ALICE. Yes, or for mine.

MAGGIE. I reckon my parlor comes afrent of your kitchens, though.

VICKEY. Parlor! I thought you said you'd only one living-room.

MAGGIE. Then it might as well be called a parlor as by any other name. Put the chairs on the hand-cart, Will.

[WILL goes out to street.]

And as for your kitchens, you've got none yet, and if you want my plan for you to work, you'll just remember all I'm taking off you is some crippled stuff that isn't yours and what I'm getting for you is marriage portions.

ALICE. What?

VICKEY. Marriage portions, Maggie?

[FREDDY reënters, accompanied by ALBERT.]

MAGGIE [to VICKEY and ALICE]. You'd better put your hats on now, or you'll be late at the church.

VICKEY. But aren't we to know first——

MAGGIE [herding them to centre exit]. You'll know all right. Be quick with your things now.

[ALICE and VICKEY go out centre door.]

MAGGIE [turns]. Good morning, Albert. Have you got what Freddy asked you for?

ALBERT. Yes, but I'm afraid——

[WILL reënters from street.]

MAGGIE. Never mind being afraid. Freddy, I told you I'd a job here for you. You go upstairs with Will. There's a sofa to come down. Get your coat off to it. Now, then, Albert.

FREDDY. But——

MAGGIE. I've told you what to do, and you can't do it in your coat. If that sofa isn't here in two minutes, I'll leave the lot of you to tackle this yourselves and a nice hash you'll make of it.

[FREDDY takes his coat off.]

FREDDY. All right, Maggie.

[ALBERT produces blue paper. She reads.]

MAGGIE. Do you call this English?

ALBERT. Legal English, Miss Hobson.

MAGGIE. I thought it weren't the sort we talk in Lancashire. What is it when you've got behind the whereases and the saids and to wits?

ALBERT. It's what you told Freddy to instruct me. Action against Henry Horatio Hobson for trespass on the premises of Jonathan Beenstock & Co., Corn Merchants, of Chapel Street, Salford, with damages to certain corn bags caused by falling on them and further damages claimed for spying on the trade secrets of the aforesaid J. B. & Co.

MAGGIE. Well, I'll take your word that this means that—I shouldn't have thought it, but I suppose lawyers are like doctors. They've each a secret language of their own so that if you get a letter from one lawyer you've to take it to another to get it read, just like a doctor sends you to a chemist with a rigmarole that no one else can read, so they can charge you what they like for a drop of colored water.

ALBERT. I've made this out to your instructions, Miss Hobson, but I'm far from saying it's good law, and I'd not be keen on going into court with it.

MAGGIE. Nobody asked you to. It won't come into court.

[WILL and FREDDY enter centre with a ramshackle horse-hair sofa.]

Open that door for them, Albert.

[ALBERT opens street door. They pass out.]

What's the time? You can see the clock from there.

ALBERT [outside street door]. It's a quarter to one.

MAGGIE [flying across to centre door, opening it, and calling]. Girls, if you're late for my wedding I'll never forgive you.

[She turns as WILL and FREDDIE return.]

Put your coats on. Now, then, Freddy, you take that paper and put it on my father in your cellar.

FREDDY. Now?

MAGGIE. Now? Yes, of course now. He might waken any time.

FREDDY. He looked fast enough. Aren't I to come to the church?

MAGGIE. Yes, if you do that quick enough to get there before we're through.

FREDDY. All right. [He goes out, pocketing the paper.]

MAGGIE. Now there's that handcart. Are we to take it with us?

ALBERT. To church! You can't do that.

WILLIE. I'll take it home.

MAGGIE. And have me waiting for you at St. Philips's. That's not for me, my lad.

ALBERT. You can't very well leave it where it is.

MAGGIE. No. There's only one thing for it. You'll have to take it to our place, Albert.

ALBERT. Me!

MAGGIE. There's the key. [Hands it from her bag.] It's 39a Oldfield Road.

ALBERT. Yes, but to push a handcart through Salford in broad daylight!

MAGGIE. It won't dirty your collar.

ALBERT. Suppose some of my friends see me?

MAGGIE. Look here, my lad, if you're too proud to do a job like that, you're not the husband for my sister.

ALBERT. It's the look of the thing. Can't you send somebody from here?

MAGGIE. No. You can think it over. [She raises trap.] Tubby!

TUBBY [below]. Yes, Miss. [He appears halfway up trap.] Why, it's Miss Maggie!

MAGGIE. Come up, Tubby. You're in charge of the shop. We'll all be out for a while.

TUBBY. I'll be up in half a minute, Miss Maggie. [He goes down, leaving trap open.]

MAGGIE. Well, Albert Prosser?

ALBERT. I suppose I must.

MAGGIE. That's right. We'll call it your wedding gift to me, and I'll allow you're putting yourself out a bit for me.

[Going with him to the door. He goes. She turns.]

Well, Will, you've not had much to say for yourself to-day. Howst feeling, lad?

WILLIE. I'm going through with it, Maggie.

MAGGIE. Eh?

WILLIE. My mind's made up. I've got wrought up to point. I'm ready.

MAGGIE. It's church we're going to, not the dentist's.

WILLIE. I know. You get rid of summat at dentist's, but it's taking summat on to go to church with a wench, and the Lord knows what.

MAGGIE. Sithee, Will, I've a respect for church. Yon's not the place for lies. The parson's going to ask you will you have me and you'll either answer truthfully or not at all. If you're not willing, just say so now, and——

WILLIE. I'll tell him "yes."

MAGGIE. And truthfully?

WILLIE. Yes, Maggie. I'm resigned.

[ALICE and VICKEY enter centre in their Sunday clothes—the same at which HOBSON grew indignant in Act I.]

ALICE. We're ready, Maggie.

MAGGIE. And time you were. It's not your weddings that you're dressing for. [By trap.] Come up, Tubby, and keep an eye on things.

VICKEY [to WILL]. Have you got the ring?

MAGGIE. I have. Do you think I'd trust him to remember?

[MAGGIE goes off with WILL. VICKEY and ALICE are following.]

SCENE II

The cellar in Oldfield Road is at once workroom, shop, and living-room. It is entered from the left corner by a door at the top of a flight of some seven stairs. Its three windows are high up at the back—not shop windows, but simply to give light. Each window has on it “William Mossop, Practical Boot-maker” reversed as seen from the inside and is illuminated dimly from outside by a neighboring street lamp.

Inside a door right leads to the bedroom. Up stage right is a small screen or partition whose purpose is to conceal the sink. A shoemaker’s bench, leather and tackle are against the wall left above the fireplace. Below the door right is a small dresser. Table centre. Seating accommodation consists solely of the sofa and the two chairs taken from HOBSON’S, now repaired and covered with cretonne. The sofa is right of the table, the two chairs left. Crowded on the sofa are, in order, from down up, ALBERT, ALICE, VICKEY, FRED.

As the curtain rises, the four are standing, tea-cups in hand, saying together “The Bride and Bridegroom.” They drink and sit. On the chair down stage is MAGGIE. From the other chair, centre, behind table,

WILL rises, nervously, and rushes his little speech like a child who has learnt a lesson. The table has hot-house flowers (in a basin) and the remains of a meal at which tea only has been drunk, and the feast is represented by the sections of a large pork pie and a small wedding cake. As WILL rises, ALBERT hammers on the table. ALICE suppresses him.

WILLIE. It's a very great pleasure to us to see you here to-night. It's an honor you do us, and I assure you, speaking for my—my wife, as well as for myself, that the—the——

MAGGIE. Generous.

WILLIE. Oh, aye. That's it. That the generous warmth of the sentiments so cordially expressed by Mr. Beenstock and so enthusiastically seconded by—no, I've gotten that wrong road round—expressed by Mr. Prosser and seconded by Mr. Beenstock—will never be forgotten by either my life partner or self—and—and I'd like to drink this toast to you in my own house. Our guests and may they all be married soon themselves.

MAGGIE [rising and drinking with WILL]. Our guests.

[WILL and MAGGIE sit.]

ALBERT [solemnly rising]. In rising to respond——

ALICE [tugging his coat]. Sit down. We've had enough of speeches. I know men fancy themselves when they're talking, but you've had one turn and you needn't start again.

ALBERT. But we ought to thank him, Alice.

ALICE. I daresay. But you'll not speak as well as he did, so we can leave it with a good wind-up. I'm free to own you took me by surprise, Will.

FREDDY. Very neat speech indeed.

VICKEY. Who taught you, Will?

WILLIE. I've been learning a lot lately.

ALICE. I thought that speech never came natural from Will.

MAGGIE. I'm educating him.

FREDDY. Very apt pupil, I must say.

MAGGIE. He'll do. Another twenty years and I know which of you three men 'ull be thought most of at the Bank.

FREDDY. That's looking ahead a bit.

MAGGIE. I'll admit it needs imagination to see it now.

ALBERT. Well, the start's all right, you know. Snug little rooms. Shop of your own. And so on.

I was wondering where you raised the capital for this, Maggie.

MAGGIE. I? You mustn't call it my shop. It's his.

ALICE. Do you mean to tell me that Willie found the capital?

MAGGIE. He's the saving sort.

ALICE. He must be if you've done this out of what father used to pay him.

MAGGIE. Well, we haven't. Not altogether. We've had help.

ALBERT. Ah!

VICKEY. It's a mystery to me where you got it from.

ALBERT. Ah!

ALICE [rising]. Well, I think we ought to be getting home, Maggie.

MAGGIE [rising, as do all]. I shouldn't marvel. I reckon Tubby's a bit tired of looking after the shop by now, and if father's wakened up and come in——

ALICE. That's it. I'm a bit nervous.

MAGGIE. He'll have an edge on his temper. Come and put your hats on.

[She is going right with ALICE and VICKEY, then stops.]

Willie, we'll need this table when they're gone. You'd better be clearing the things away.

WILLIE. Yes, Maggie.

[MAGGIE turns to right.]

FRED. But—you——

ALBERT. Oh, Lord!

[They laugh. MAGGIE turns quietly.]

MAGGIE [quite calmly]. And you and Fred can just lend him a hand with the washing up, Albert.

VICKEY [really outraged]. Maggie, we're guests.

MAGGIE. I know. Only Albert laughed at Willie, and washing up 'ull maybe make him think on that it's not allowed.

[She ushers ALICE and VICKEY out right and follows. WILLIE begins to put pots on tray which he gets from behind screen right.]

ALBERT [after he and FRED have looked at each other, then at WILL, then at each other again]. Are you going to wash up pots?

FREDDY. Are you?

ALBERT. I look at it like this myself. All being well, you and I are marrying into this family and we know what Maggie is. If we start giving in to her now, she'll be a nuisance to us all our lives.

FREDDY. That's right enough, but there's this plan of hers to get us married. Are you prepared to work it for us?

ALBERT. I'm not. Anything but.

FREDDY. Then till she's done it we're to keep the sweet side of Maggie.

ALBERT. But, washing pots!

[There is a pause. They look at WILL.]

FREDDY. What would you do in our place, Will?

WILLIE. Please yourselves. I'm getting on with what she told me.

FREDDY. You're married to her. We aren't.

ALBERT. What do you need the table for in such a hurry?

WILLIE. Nay, I'm not in any hurry myself.

FREDDY. She is.

WILLIE. It'll be for my lessons, I reckon. She's schooling me.

FREDDY. And don't you want to learn, then?

WILLIE. 'Tisn't that. I—just don't want to be rude to you—turning you out so early. I don't see you need to go away so soon.

ALBERT. Why not?

WILLIE. I'm fond of a bit of company.

ALBERT. Do you want company on your wedding night?

WILLIE. I don't favor your going so soon.

FREDDY. He's afraid to be alone with her. That's what it is. He's shy of his wife.

WILLIE. That's a fact. I've not been married before, you see. I've not been left alone with her, either. Up to now she's been coming round to where I lodged at Tubby Grimshaw's to give me my lessons. It's different now, and I freely own I'm feeling awkward-like. I'd be deeply obliged if you would stay on a bit to help to—to thaw the ice for me.

FREDDY. You've been engaged to her, haven't you?

WILLIE. Aye, but it weren't for long. And you see, Maggie's not the sort you get familiar with.

FREDDY. You had quite long enough to thaw the ice. It's not our job to do your melting for you.

ALBERT. No. Fred, these pots need washing. We will wash them.

[FRED and ALBERT go up behind screen. Water runs. They are seen flourishing towels.]

WILLIE. Fred, would you like it yourself with—with a wench like Maggie?

FREDDY. That's not the point. It wasn't me she married.

WILLIE. It's that being alone with her that worries me, and I did think you'd stand by a fellow man to make things not so strange at first.

ALBERT. That's not the way we look at it. Hurry up with those cups, Fred.

[MAGGIE enters from right with VICKEY and ALICE in outdoor clothes.]

MAGGIE. Have you broken anything yet, Albert?

ALBERT [indignantly]. Broken? No.

MAGGIE. Too slow to, I expect.

FREDDY. I must say you don't show much gratitude.

ALBERT. Aren't you at all surprised to find us doing this?

MAGGIE. Surprised? I told you to do it.

FREDDY. Yes, but——

MAGGIE [taking towel from him]. You can stop now. I'll finish when you're gone.

[Knock at door upstairs, left.]

ALICE. Who's that?

MAGGIE. Some one who can't read, I reckon. You hung that card on door, Will?

WILLIE. Aye, it's there. And you wrote it, Maggie.

MAGGIE. I knew better than to trust to you.

"Business suspended for the day" it says, and they that can't read it can go on knocking.

HOBSON [off left upstairs]. Are you in, Maggie?

VICKEY. It's father!

ALBERT. Oh, Lord!

MAGGIE. What's the matter? Are you afraid of him?

FREDDY. Well, I think, all things considered, and seeing——

MAGGIE. All right. We'll consider 'em. You can go into the bedroom, the lot of you. . . . No, not you, Willie. The rest. I'll shout when I want you.

ALICE. When he's gone.

MAGGIE. It'll be before he's gone.

[MAGGIE crosses to right with them.]

VICKEY. But we don't want——

MAGGIE. Is this your house or mine?

VICKEY. It's your cellar.

MAGGIE. And I'm in charge of it.

[The four go into bedroom right. WILL is going to stairs.]

You sit you still, and don't forget you're gaffer here. I'll open door.

[MAGGIE goes upstairs and opens door. Enters HOBSON to top stair.]

HOBSON [with some slight apology]. Well, Maggie.

MAGGIE [uninvitingly]. Well, father.

HOBSON [without confidence]. I'll come in.

MAGGIE [standing in his way]. Well, I don't know. I'll have to ask the master about that.

HOBSON. Eh? The master?

MAGGIE. You and him didn't part on the best of terms, you know. [Over her shoulder.] Will, it's my father, is he to come in?

WILLIE. Aye, let him come.

[HOBSON comes downstairs. MAGGIE closes door behind him and follows.]

HOBSON. You don't sound cordial about your invitation, young man.

WILLIE. Nay, but I am. [Shaking hands for a long time.] I'm right down glad to see you, Mr. Hobson. It makes the wedding day complete-like, you being her father and I—I hope you'll see your way to staying a good long while.

HOBSON. Well——

MAGGIE. That's enough, Will. You don't need to overdo it, and you can sit down for five minutes, father. That sofa 'ull bear your weight. It's been tested.

WILLIE [taking up tea-pot]. There's nobbut tea to drink and I reckon what's in the pot is stewed, so I'll——

MAGGIE [taking pot off him as he moves to fireplace with it]. You'll not do owt of sort. Father likes his liquids strong.

WILLIE [at table again]. A piece of pork pie now, Mr. Hobson?

HOBSON [groaning]. Pork pie!

MAGGIE [sharply]. You'll be sociable now you're here, I hope. [She pours tea.]

HOBSON. It wasn't sociability that brought me, Maggie.

MAGGIE. What was it, then?

HOBSON. Maggie, I'm in disgrace. A sore and sad misfortune's fallen on me.

MAGGIE [cutting]. Happen a piece of wedding cake 'ull do you good.

HOBSON [shuddering]. It's sweet.

MAGGIE. That's natural in cake.

[MAGGIE sits.]

HOBSON. I've gotten such a head.

MAGGIE. Aye. But wedding cake's a question of heart. There'd be no bride cakes made at all if we thought first about our heads. I'm quite aware it's foolishness, but I've a wish to see my father sitting at my table eating my wedding cake on my wedding day.

HOBSON. It's a very serious thing I came about, Maggie.

MAGGIE. It's not more serious than knowing that you wish us well.

HOBSON. Well, Maggie, you know my way. When a thing's done, it's done. You've had your way and done what you wanted. I'm none proud of the choice you made and I'll not lie and say I am, but I've shaken your husband's hand, and that's a sign for you. The milk's spilt and I'll not cry.

MAGGIE [holding plate]. Then there's your cake, and you can eat it.

HOBSON. I've given you my word there's no ill feeling.

MAGGIE. So now we'll have the deed.

HOBSON. You're a hard woman. [He eats.] You've no consideration for the weakness of old age.

MAGGIE. Finished?

HOBSON. Pass me that tea.

[She passes: he drinks.]

That's easier.

MAGGIE. Now tell me what it is you came about?

HOBSON. I'm in sore trouble, Maggie.

MAGGIE [rising]. Then I'll leave you with my husband to talk it over.

HOBSON. Eh?

MAGGIE. You'll not be wanting me. Women are only in your way.

HOBSON [rising]. Maggie, you're not going to desert me in the hour of my need, are you?

MAGGIE. Surely to goodness you don't want a woman to help you after all you've said! Will 'ull do his best, I make no doubt. [She goes right.] Give me a call when you've finished, Will.

HOBSON [following her]. Maggie! It's private.

MAGGIE. Why, yes. I'm going and you can discuss it man to man with no fools of women about.

HOBSON. I tell you I've come to see you, not him. It's private from him.

MAGGIE. Private from Will? Nay, it isn't. Will's in the family, and you've nowt to say to me that can't be said to him.

HOBSON. I've to tell you this with him there?

MAGGIE. Will and me's one.

WILLIE. Sit down, Mr. Hobson.

[HOBSON sits on sofa.]

MAGGIE. You call him father now.

WILLIE. Do I?

HOBSON. Does he?

MAGGIE. He does. Sit down, Will.

[WILL sits right of table. MAGGIE stands.]

Now, if you're ready, father, we are. What's the matter?

HOBSON. That—[producing the blue paper—that's the matter.

[MAGGIE accepts and passes it to WILL and goes behind his chair. He is reading upside down. She bends over chair and turns it right way up.]

MAGGIE. What is it, Will?

HOBSON [banging table]. Ruin, Maggie, that's what it is! Ruin and bankruptcy. Am I Vicar's Warden at St. Philips's or am I not? Am I Hobson of Hobson's Boot Shop on Chapel Street, Salford? Am I a respectable ratepayer and the father of a family or——

MAGGIE [who has been reading over WILL's shoulder]. It's an action for damages for trespass, I see.

HOBSON. It's a stab in the back, it's an unfair, un-English, cowardly way of taking a mean advantage of a casual accident.

MAGGIE. Did you trespass?

HOBSON. Maggie, I say it solemnly, it is all your fault. I had an accident. I don't deny it. I'd been in the "Moonraker's" and I'd stayed too long. And why? Why did I stay too long? To try to forget that I'd a thankless child, to erase from the tablets of memory the recollection of your conduct. That was the cause of it. And the result, the blasting, withering result? I fell into that cellar. I slept in that cellar and I awoke to this catastrophe. Lawyers . . . law-costs . . . publicity . . . ruin.

MAGGIE. I'm still asking you. Was it an accident? Or did you trespass?

HOBSON. It's an accident. As plain as Salford Town Hall it's an accident, but they that live by law have twisted ways of putting things that make white show as black. I'm in their grip at last. I've kept away from lawyers all my life, I've hated lawyers, and they've got their chance to make me bleed for it. I've dodged them, and they've caught me in the end. They'll squeeze me dry for it.

WILLIE. My word, and that's summat like a squeeze and all.

MAGGIE. I can see it's serious. I shouldn't wonder if you didn't lose some trade from this.

HOBSON. Wonder! It's as certain as Christmas. My good-class customers are not going to buy their boots from a man who's stood up in open court and had to acknowledge he was overcome at 12 o'clock in the morning. They'll not remember it was private grief that caused it all. They'll only think the worse of me because I couldn't control my daughter better than to let her go and be the cause of sorrow to me in my age. That's what you've done. Brought this on me, you two, between you.

WILLIE. Do you think it will get into the paper, Maggie?

MAGGIE. Yes, for sure. You'll see your name in the Salford Reporter, father.

HOBSON. Salford Reporter! Yes, and more. When there is ruin and disaster, and outrageous fortune overwhelms a man of my importance to the world, it isn't only the Salford Reporter that takes note of it. This awful cross that's come to me will be recorded in the Manchester Courier for the whole of Lancashire to read.

WILLIE. Eh, by gum, think of that! To have your name appearing in the Courier! Why, it's very near worth while to be ruined for the pleasure of reading about yourself in a printed paper.

HOBSON. It's there for others to read besides me, my lad.

WILLIE. Aye, you're right. I didn't think of that. This 'ull give a lot of satisfaction to a many I could name. Other people's troubles is mostly what folks read the paper for, and I reckon it's twice the pleasure to them when it's trouble of a man they know themselves. [He is perfectly simple and has no malicious intention.]

HOBSON. To hear you talk it sounds like a pleasure to you.

WILLIE [sincerely]. Nay, indeed it's not. You've ate my wedding cake and you've shook my hand. We're friends, I hope, and I were nobbut meditating like a friend. I always think it's best to look on the worst side of things first, then whatever chances can't be worse than you looked for. There's St. Philips's now. I don't suppose you'll go on being Vicar's warden after this to do, and it brought you a powerful lot of customers from the church, did that.

HOBSON. I'm getting a lot of comfort from your husband, Maggie.

MAGGIE. It's about what you deserve.

HOBSON. Have you got any more consolation for me, Will?

WILLIE [aggrieved]. I only spoke what came into my mind.

HOBSON. Well, have you spoken it all?

WILLIE. I can keep my mouth shut if you'd rather.

HOBSON. Don't strain yourself, Will Mossop. When a man's mind is full of thoughts like yours, they're better out than in. You let them come, my lad. They'll leave a cleaner place behind.

WILLIE. I'm not much good at talking, and I always seem to say wrong things when I do talk. I'm sorry if my well-meant words don't suit your taste, but I thought you came here for advice.

HOBSON. I didn't come to you, you jumped-up cock-a-hooping——

MAGGIE. That 'ull do, father. My husband's trying to help you.

HOBSON [glares impatiently for a time, then meekly says]. Yes, Maggie.

MAGGIE. Now, about this accident of yours.

HOBSON. Yes, Maggie.

MAGGIE. It's the publicity that you're afraid of most.

HOBSON. It's being dragged into a court of law at all, me that's voted right all through my life and been a sound supporter of the Queen and Constitution.

MAGGIE. Then we must try to keep it out of court.

HOBSON. If there are lawyers in Heaven, Maggie, which I doubt, they may keep cases out of courts there. On earth a lawyer's job's to squeeze a man and squeeze him where his squirming's seen the most—in court.

MAGGIE. I've heard of cases being settled out of court, in private.

HOBSON. In private? Yes, I daresay, and all the worse for that. It's done amongst themselves in lawyers' offices behind closed doors so no one can see they're squeezing twice as hard in private as they'd dare to do in public. There's some restraint demanded by a public place, but privately! It'll cost a fortune to settle this in private, Maggie.

MAGGIE. I make no doubt it's going to cost you something, but you'd rather do it privately than publicly?

HOBSON. If only it were not a lawyer's office.

MAGGIE. You can settle it with the lawyer out of his office. You can settle with him here.

[She goes right and opens door.]

Albert!

[Enter ALBERT, who leaves door open.]

This is Mr. Prosser of Prosser, Pilkington, and Prosser.

HOBSON. He is!

MAGGIE. Yes.

HOBSON [incredulously]. You're a lawyer?

ALBERT. Yes, I'm a lawyer.

HOBSON [with disgust almost too deep for words].
At your age!

MAGGIE [at door right.] Come along, all of you.

[There is reluctance inside, then VICKEY, ALICE, and FRED enter.]

HOBSON. Alice! Vickey!

MAGGIE. Family gathering. This is Mr. Beenstock, of Beenstock & Co.

HOBSON. What! Here!

[The situation is plainly beyond his mused brain's capacity.]

MAGGIE. When you've got a thing to settle, you need all the parties to be present.

HOBSON. But there are so many of them. Where have they all come from?

MAGGIE. My bedroom.

HOBSON. You're—— Maggie, I wish you'd explain before my brain gives way.

MAGGIE. It's quite simple. I got them here because I expected you.

HOBSON. You expected me!

MAGGIE. You're in trouble, and I knew you'd bring your troubles to me.

HOBSON [shaking his head, then as if finding an outlet, pouncing on ALICE]. What's it got to do with Alice and Vicky? What are they doing here? What's happening to the shop?

ALICE. Tubby Wadlow's looking after it.

HOBSON. And is it Tubby's job to look after the shop?

VICKEY. He'd got no other job. The shop's so slack since Maggie left.

HOBSON [swelling with rage]. And do you run that shop? Do you give orders there? Do you decide when you can put your hats on and walk out of it?

MAGGIE. They come out because it's my wedding day, father. It's reason enough, and Will and me 'ull do the same for them. We'll close the shop and welcome on their wedding days.

HOBSON. Their wedding days! That's long time off. It'll be many a year before there's another wedding in this family, I give you my word. One daughter defying me is quite enough.

ALBERT. Hadn't we better get to business, sir?

HOBSON. Young man, don't abuse a noble word. You're a lawyer. By your own admission you're a lawyer. Honest men live by business and lawyers live by law.

ALBERT. In this matter, sir, I am following the instructions of my client, Mr. Beenstock, and the remark you have just let fall, before witnesses, appears to me to bear a libellous reflection on the action of my client.

HOBSON. What! So it's libel now. Isn't trespass and . . . and spying on trade secrets enough for you, you blood-sucking——

ALBERT. One moment, Mr. Hobson. You can call me what you like——

HOBSON. And I shall. You——

ALBERT. But I wish to remind you, in your own interests, that abuse of a lawyer is remembered in the costs. Now, my client tells me he is prepared to settle this matter out of court. Personally, I don't advise him to, because we should probably get higher damages in court. But Mr. Beenstock has no desire to be vindictive. He remembers your position, your reputation for respectability, and——

HOBSON. How much?

ALBERT. Er—I beg your pardon?

HOBSON. I'm not so fond of the sound of your voice as you are. What's the figure?

ALBERT. The sum we propose, which will include my ordinary costs, but not my additional costs incurred by your use of defamatory language to me, is one thousand pounds.

HOBSON. What!

MAGGIE. It isn't.

HOBSON. One thousand pounds for tumbling down a cellar! Why, I might have broken my leg.

ALBERT. That is in the nature of an admission, Mr. Hobson. Our flour bags saved your legs from fracture and I am therefore inclined to add to the sum I have stated a reasonable estimate of the doctor's bill we have saved you by protecting your legs with our bags.

MAGGIE. Albert Prosser, I can see you're going to get on in the world, but you needn't be greedy here. That one thousand's too much.

ALBERT. We thought——

MAGGIE. Then you can think again.

FREDDY. But——

MAGGIE. If there are any more signs of greediness from you two, there'll be a counter-action for personal damages due to your criminal carelessness in leaving your cellar flap open.

HOBSON. Maggie, you've saved me. I'll bring that action. I'll show them up.

MAGGIE. You're not damaged, and one lawyer's quite enough. But he'll be more reasonable now. I know perfectly well what father can afford to pay, and it's not a thousand pounds nor anything like a thousand pounds.

HOBSON. Not so much of your can't afford, Maggie. You'll make me out a pauper.

MAGGIE. You can afford £500 and you're going to pay £500.

HOBSON. Oh, but . . . there's a difference between affording and paying.

MAGGIE. You can go to the courts and be reported in the papers if you like.

HOBSON. It's the principle I care about. I'm being beaten by a lawyer.

VICKEY. Father, dear, how can you be beaten when they wanted a thousand pounds and you're only going to give £500?

HOBSON. I hadn't thought of that.

VICKEY. It's they who are beaten.

HOBSON. I'd take a good few beatings myself at the price, Vickey. Still, I want this keeping out of court.

ALBERT. Then we can take it as settled?

HOBSON. Do you want to see the money before you believe me? Is that your nasty lawyer's way?

ALBERT. Not at all, Mr. Hobson. Your word is as good as your bond.

VICKEY. It's settled! It's settled! Hurrah! Hurrah!

HOBSON. Well, I don't see what you have to cheer about, Vickey. I'm not to be dragged to public scorn, but you know this is a tidy bit of money to be going out of the family.

MAGGIE. It's not going out of the family, father.

HOBSON. I don't see how you make it out.

MAGGIE. Their wedding day is not so far off as you thought, now there's the half of five hundred pounds apiece for them to make a start on.

[ALBERT and ALICE, FRED and VICKEY stand arm in arm.]

HOBSON. You mean to tell me——

MAGGIE. You won't forget you've passed your word, will you, father?

HOBSON. I've been diddled. It's a plant. It——

MAGGIE. It takes two daughters off your hands at once, and clears your shop of all the fools of women that used to lumber up the place.

ALICE. It will be much easier for you without us in your way, father.

HOBSON. Aye, and you can keep out of my way and all. Do you hear that, all of you? I'll run that shop with men and—and I'll show Salford how it should be run. Don't you imagine there'll be room for you when you come home crying and tired of your fine husbands. I'm rid of ye, and it's a lasting riddance, mind. I'll pay this money, that you've robbed me of, and that's the end of it. All of you. You, especially, Maggie. I'm not blind yet, and I can see who 'tis I've got to thank for this. [He goes to foot of stairs.]

MAGGIE. Don't be vicious, father.

HOBSON. Will Mossop, I'm sorry for you. Take you for all in all, you're the best of the bunch. You're a backward lad, but you know your trade and it's an honest one.

[HOBSON is going up the stairs.]

ALICE. So does my Albert know his trade.

HOBSON [halfway upstairs]. I'll grant you that. He knows his trade. He's good at robbery. And I've to have it on my conscience that my daughters wed a lawyer and an employer of lawyers.

VICKEY. It didn't worry your conscience to keep us serving in the shop at no wages.

HOBSON. I kept you, didn't I? It's some one else's job to victual you in future. Aye, you may grin, you two, but girls don't live on air. You're penny buns 'ull cost you tuppence now—and more. Wait till the families begin to come. Don't come to me for keep, that's all.

ALICE. Father!

HOBSON. Aye. You may father me. But that's a piece of work I've finished with. I've done with fathering, and they're beginning it. They'll know what marrying a woman means before so long. They're putting chains upon themselves and I have thrown the shackles off. I've suffered thirty years and more and I'm a free man from to-day. Lord, what a thing you're taking on! You poor, poor wretches. You're red-nosed robbers, but you're going to pay for it.

[He opens door and exit.]

MAGGIE. You'd better arrange to get married quick. Alice and Vickey won't have a sweet time with him.

FREDDY. Can they go home at all?

MAGGIE. Why not?

FREDDY. After what he said?

MAGGIE. He'll not remember half of it. He's for the "Moonraker's" now—if there's time. What is the time?

ALBERT. Time we were going. Maggie, you'll be glad to see the back of us. [He shows MAGGIE his watch.]

WILLIE. No. No. I wouldn't dream of asking you to go.

MAGGIE. Then I would. It's high time we turned you out. There are your hats.

[She gets ALBERT'S and FRED'S hats.]

Good-night.

[ALBERT and FRED go upstairs, MAGGIE practically pushing them.]

Good-night, Vickey.

VICKEY [with a quick kiss]. Good-night, Maggie.

[VICKEY goes upstairs. She and FRED go out.]

MAGGIE. Good-night, Alice.

ALICE. Good-night, Maggie. [The same quick kiss.] And thank you.

MAGGIE. Oh, that! [She goes with her to stairs.]
I'll see you again soon, only don't come round here too much because Will and me's going to be busy and you'll maybe find enough to do yourselves with getting wed.

ALICE. I daresay. [Upstairs.]

MAGGIE. Send us word when the day is.

ALBERT. We'll be glad to see you at the wedding.

MAGGIE. We'll come to that. You'll be too grand for us afterwards.

ALBERT. Oh, no, Maggie.

MAGGIE. Well, happen we'll be catching up with you before so long. We're only starting here. Good-night.

ALBERT-ALICE. Good-night, Maggie.

[They go out, closing door. MAGGIE turns to WILL.]

MAGGIE. Now you've heard what I've said of you to-night. In twenty years you're going to be thought more of than either of your brothers-in-law.

WILLIE. I heard you say it, Maggie.

MAGGIE. And we're to make it good. I'm not a boaster, Will. And it's to be in less than twenty years, and all.

WILLIE. Well, I dunno. They've a long start on us.

MAGGIE. And you've got me. Your slate's in the bedroom. Bring it out. I'll have this table clear by the time you come back.

[She hustles off the last remains of the meal, putting the flowers on the mantel and takes off cloth. WILL goes to bedroom and returns with a slate and slate pencil. The slate is covered with writing. He puts it on table.]

MAGGIE. Off with your Sunday coat now. You don't want to make a mess of that.

[He takes coat off and gets rag from behind screen and brings it to table.]

What are you doing with that mopping rag?

WILLIE. I was going to wash out what's on the slate.

MAGGIE. Let me see it first. That's what you did last night at Tubby's after I came here?

WILLIE. Yes, Maggie.

MAGGIE [reading]. "There is always room at the top." [Washing it out.] Your writing's improving, Will. [She sits and writes.] I'll set you a short copy for to-night, because it's getting late and we've a lot to do in the morning. "Great things grow from small." Now, then, you can sit down here and copy that.

[He takes her place at the table. MAGGIE watches a moment, then goes to fireplace and fingers the flowers.]

I'll put these flowers of Mrs. Hepworth's behind the fire, Will. We'll not want litter in the place come working time to-morrow.

[She takes up basin, stops, looks at WILL who is bent over his slate, and takes a flower out, throwing the rest behind the fire and going to bedroom with the one.]

WILLIE [looking up]. You're saving one.

MAGGIE [caught in an act of sentiment and apologetically]. I thought I'd press it in my Bible for a keepsake, Will. I'm not beyond liking to be reminded of this day.

[She looks at screen and yawns.]

Lord, I'm tired. I reckon I'll leave those pots till morning. It's a slackish way of starting, but I don't get married every day.

WILLIE [industrious at his slate]. No.

MAGGIE. I'm for my bed. You finish that copy before you come.

WILLIE. Yes, Maggie.

[Exit MAGGIE to bedroom, with the flower. She closes door. WILL copies, finishes, then rises and rakes out fire. He looks shyly at bedroom door, sits and takes his boots off. He rises, boots in hand, moves towards door, hesitates, and turns back, puts boots down, and takes off his collar. Then hesitates again, finally makes up his mind, puts out light, and lies down on sofa. In a minute MAGGIE opens the bedroom door. She has a candle and is in a plain calico night-dress. She comes to WILL, shines the light on him, takes him by the ear, and returns with him to bedroom.]

Curtain

ACT III

ACT III

The scene represents HOBSON'S living-room, the door to which was seen in Act I. From inside the room that door is now seen to be at the left, the opposite wall having the fireplace and the back wall another door to the house.

It is eight o'clock on a morning a year later.

In front of the fireplace is a horse-hair sofa. Chairs to match are at the table. There are colored prints of Queen Victoria and the Prince Consort on the walls on each side of the door at the back, and a plain one of Lord Beaconsfield over the fireplace. Antimacassars abound, and the decoration is quaintly ugly. It is an overcrowded, cozy room. HOBSON is quite contented with it, and doesn't realize that it is at present very dirty.

There is probably a kitchen elsewhere, but TUBBY WADLOW is cooking bacon at the fire. He is simultaneously laying breakfast for one on the table. At both proceedings he is a puzzled and incompetent amateur. Presently the left door opens, and JIM HEELER appears.

JIM [crossing to centre door]. I'll go straight up to him, Tubby.

TUBBY [checking him]. He's getting up, Mr. Heeler.

JIM. Getting up! Why, you said——

TUBBY. I told you what he told me to tell you. Run for Doctor MacFarlane, he said. And I ran for Doctor Macfarlane. Now go to Mr. Heeler, he said, and tell him I'm very ill, and I came and told you. Then he said he would get up, and I was to have his breakfast ready for him, and he'd see you down here.

JIM. Nonsense, Tubby. Of course, I'll go up to him.

TUBBY. You know what he is, sir. I'll get blamed if you go, and he's short-tempered this morning.

JIM. I don't want to get you into trouble, Tubby.
[He sits.]

TUBBY. Thank you, Mr. Heeler.

JIM. I quite thought it was something serious.

TUBBY. If you ask me, it is.

JIM. Which way?

TUBBY. Every way you look at it. Mr. Hobson's not his own old self, and the shop's not its own old self, and look at me. Now I ask you, Mr. Heeler, man to man, is this work for a foreman shoe hand? Cooking and laying tables and——

JIM. By all accounts there's not much else for you to do.

TUBBY. There's better things than being a housemaid, if it's only making clogs.

JIM. They tell me clogs are a cut line.

TUBBY. Well, what are you to do? There's nothing else wanted. Hobson's in a bad way, and I'm telling no secret when I say it. It's a fact that's known.

JIM. It's a thousand pities with an old-established trade like this.

TUBBY. And who's to blame?

JIM. I don't think you ought to discuss that with me, Tubby.

TUBBY. Don't you? I'm an old servant of the master's, and I'm sticking to him now when everybody's calling me a doting fool because I don't look after Tubby Wadlow first, and if that don't give me the right to say what I please, I don't know. It's temper's ruining this shop, Mr. Heeler. Temper and obstinacy.

JIM. They say in Chapel Street it's Willie Mossop.

TUBBY. Willie's a good lad, though I say it that trained him. He hit us hard, did Willie, but we'd have got round that in time. With care, you understand, and tact. Tact. That's what the gaffer lacks. Miss Maggie, now . . . well, she's a marvel, aye, a fair knock out. Not slavish, mind you. Stood up to the customers all the time, but she'd a way with her that sold the goods and made them come again for more. Look at us now. Men assistants in the shop.

JIM. Cost more than women.

TUBBY. Cost? They'd be dear at any price. Look here, Mr. Heeler, take yourself. When you go to buy a pair of boots do you like to be tried on by a man or a nice soft young woman?

JIM. Well——

TUBBY. There you are. Stands to reason. It's human nature.

JIM. But there are two sides to that, Tubby. Look at the other.

TUBBY. Ladies?

JIM. Yes.

TUBBY. Ladies that are ladies wants trying on by their own sex, and them that aren't buys clogs. It's the good-class trade that pays, and Hobson's have lost it.

[Enter HOBSON centre, unshaven, without collar.]

JIM [with cheerful sympathy]. Well, Henry!

HOBSON [with acute melancholy and self-pity]. Oh, Jim! Oh, Jim! Oh, Jim!

TUBBY. Will you sit on the sofa by the fire or at the table?

HOBSON. The table? Breakfast? Bacon? Bacon, and I'm like this.

[JIM assists him across to sofa.]

JIM. When a man's like this he wants a woman about the house, Henry.

HOBSON [sitting]. I'll want then.

TUBBY. Shall I go for Miss Maggie, sir. Mrs. Mossop, I mean?

JIM. I think your daughters should be here.

HOBSON. They should. Only they're not. They're married, and I'm deserted by them all and I'll die deserted, then perhaps they'll be sorry for the way they've treated me. Tubby, have you got no work to do in the shop?

TUBBY. I might find some if I looked hard.

HOBSON. Then go and look. And take that bacon with you. I don't like the smell.

TUBBY [getting bacon]. Are you sure you wouldn't like Miss Maggie here? I'll go for her and——

HOBSON. Oh, go for her. Go for the devil. What does it matter who you go for? I'm a dying man.

[TUBBY takes bacon and goes out left.]

JIM. What's all this talk about dying, Henry?

HOBSON. Oh, Jim! Oh, Jim! I've sent for the doctor. We'll know soon how near the end is.

JIM. Well, this is very sudden. You've never been ill in your life.

HOBSON. It's been saved up, and all come now at once.

JIM. What are your symptoms, Henry?

HOBSON. I'm all one symptom, head to foot. I'm frightened of myself, Jim. That's worst. You would call me a clean man, Jim?

JIM. Clean? Of course I would. Clean in body and mind.

HOBSON. I'm dirty now. I haven't washed this morning. Couldn't face the water. The only use I saw for water was to drown myself. The same with shaving. I've thrown my razor through the window. Had to or I'd have cut my throat.

JIM. Oh, come, come.

HOBSON. It's awful. I'll never trust myself again. I'm going to grow a beard—if I live.

JIM. You'll cheat the undertaker, Henry, but I fancy a doctor could improve you. What do you reckon is the cause of it now?

HOBSON. "Moonraker's."

JIM. You don't think——

HOBSON. I don't think. I know. I've seen it happen to others, but I never thought that it would come to me.

JIM. Nor me, neither. You're not a toper, Henry. I grant you're regular, but you don't exceed. It's a hard thing if a man can't take a drop of ale without its getting back at him like this. Why, it might be my turn next.

TUBBY. Here's Doctor MacFarlane.

[Exit TUBBY.]

DOCTOR. Good morning, gentlemen. Where's my patient? [He puts hat on table.]

JIM [speaking without indicating HOBSON]. Here. [He does not rise.]

DOCTOR. Here? Up?

HOBSON. Looks like it.

DOCTOR. And for a patient who's downstairs, I'm made to rise from my bed at this hour?

JIM. It's not so early as all that.

DOCTOR. But I've been up all night, sir. Young woman with her first. Are you Mr. Hobson?

JIM [rising quickly]. Certainly not. I'm not ill.

DOCTOR. Hum. Not much to choose between you. You've both got your fate written on your faces.

JIM. Do you mean that I——?

DOCTOR. I mean he has and you will.

HOBSON. Doctor, will you attend to me?

DOCTOR. Yes. Now, sir. [He sits by him and holds his wrist.]

HOBSON. I've never been in a bad way before this morning. Never wanted a doctor in my life.

DOCTOR. You've needed. But you've not sent.

HOBSON. But this morning——

DOCTOR. I ken—well.

HOBSON. What! You know!

DOCTOR. Any fool would ken.

HOBSON. Eh?

DOCTOR. Any fool but one fool and that's yourself.

HOBSON. You're damned polite.

DOCTOR. If ye want flattery, I daresay ye can get it from your friend. I'm giving you ma medical opinion.

HOBSON. I want your opinion on my complaint, not on my character.

DOCTOR. Your complaint and your character are the same.

HOBSON. Then you'll kindly separate them and you'll tell me——

DOCTOR [taking up hat]. I'll tell you nothing, sir. I don't diagnose as my patients wish, but as my intellect and sagacity direct. Good morning to you.

JIM. But you have not diagnosed.

DOCTOR. Sir, if I am to interview a patient in the presence of a third party, the least that third party can do is to keep his mouth shut.

JIM. After that, there's only one thing for it. He shifts or I do.

HOBSON. You'd better go, Jim.

JIM. There are other doctors, Henry.

HOBSON. I'll keep this one. I've got to teach him a lesson. Scotchmen can't come over Salford lads this road.

JIM. If that's it, I'll leave you.

HOBSON. That's it. I can bully as well as a foreigner.

DOCTOR. That's better, Mr. Hobson. [He puts hat down.]

HOBSON. If I'm better, you've not had much to do with it.

DOCTOR. I think my calculated rudeness——

HOBSON. If you calculate your fees at the same rate as your rudeness, they'll be high.

DOCTOR. I calculate by time, Mr. Hobson, so we'd better get to business. Will you unbutton your shirt?

HOBSON [doing it]. No hanky panky now.

DOCTOR [ignoring his remark and examining]. Aye. It just confirms ma first opinion. Ye've had a breakdown this A. M.?

HOBSON. You might say so.

DOCTOR. Melancholic? Depressed?

HOBSON [buttoning shirt]. Question was whether the razor would beat me, or I'd beat razor. I won, that time. The razor's in the yard. But I'll never dare to try shaving myself again.

DOCTOR. And do you seriously require me to tell you the cause, Mr. Hobson?

HOBSON. I'm paying thee brass to tell me.

DOCTOR. Chronic alcoholism, if you know what that means.

HOBSON. Aye.

DOCTOR. A serious case.

HOBSON. I know it's serious. What do you think you're here for? It isn't to tell me something I know already. It's to cure me.

DOCTOR. Very well. I will write you a prescription. [Sits at table and writes with copying pencil.]

HOBSON. Stop that!

DOCTOR. \I beg your pardon?

HOBSON. I won't take it. None of your druggist's muck for me. I'm particular about what I put into my stomach.

DOCTOR. Mr. Hobson, if you don't mend your manners, I'll certify you for a lunatic asylum. Are you aware that you've drunk yourself within six months of the grave? You'd a warning this morning that any sane man would listen to and you're going to listen to it, sir.

HOBSON. By taking your prescription?

DOCTOR. Precisely. You will take this mixture, Mr. Hobson, and you will practise total abstinence for the future.

HOBSON. You ask me to give up my reasonable refreshment!

DOCTOR. I forbid alcohol absolutely.

HOBSON. Much use your forbidding is. I've had my liquor for as long as I remember, and I'll have it to the end. If I'm to be beaten by beer I'll die fighting, and I'm none practising unnatural teetotalism for the sake of lengthening out my unalcoholic days. Life's got to be worth living before I'll live it.

DOCTOR [taking hat again]. If that's the way you talk, my services are of no use to you.

HOBSON. They're not. I'll pay you on the nail for this.

[Sorting money from pocket.]

DOCTOR. I congratulate you on the impulse, Mr. Hobson.

HOBSON. Nay, it's a fair deal, doctor. I've had value. You've been a tonic to me. When I got up I never thought to see the "Moonraker's" again, but I'm ready for my early morning draught this minute. [Holds out money.]

DOCTOR [putting hat down, and talking earnestly]. Man, will ye no be warned? Ye pig-headed animal, alcohol is poison to ye, deadly, virulent with a system in the state yours is.

HOBSON. You're getting warm about it. Will you take your fee? [Holding out money.]

DOCTOR. Yes. When I've earned it. Put it in your pocket, Mr. Hobson. I hae na finished with ye yet.

HOBSON. I thought you had.

DOCTOR. Do ye ken that ye're defying me? Ye'll die fighting, will ye? Aye, it's a gay, high-sounding sentiment, ma mannie, but ye'll no dae it, do ye hear? Ye'll no slip from me now. I've got ma grip on ye. Ye'll die sober, and ye'll live the longest time ye can before ye die. Have ye a wife, Mr. Hobson?

[HOBSON points upwards.]

In bed?

HOBSON. Higher than that.

DOCTOR. It's a pity. A man like you should keep a wife handy.

HOBSON. I'm not so partial to women.

DOCTOR. Women are a necessity, sir. Have ye no female relative that can manage ye?

HOBSON. Manage?

DOCTOR. Keep her thumb firm on ye?

HOBSON. I've got three daughters, Doctor Macfarlane, and they tried to keep their thumbs on me.

DOCTOR. Well? Where are they?

HOBSON. Married—and queerly married.

DOCTOR. You drove them to it.

HOBSON. They all grew uppish. Maggie worst of all.

DOCTOR. Maggie? Then I'll tell ye what ye'll do, Mr. Hobson. You will get Maggie back. At any price. At all costs to your pride, as your medical man I order you to get Maggie back. I don't know Maggie, but I prescribe her, and—damn ye, sir, are ye going to defy me again?

HOBSON. I tell you I won't have it.

DOCTOR. You'll have to have it. You're a dunder-headed lump of obstinacy, but I've taken a fancy to ye and I decline to let ye kill yeself.

HOBSON. I've escaped from the thralldom of women once, and——

DOCTOR. And a pretty mess you've made of your liberty. Now this Maggie ye mention—if ye'll tell me where she's to be found, I'll just stop round and have a crack with her maself, for I've gone beyond the sparing of a bit of trouble over ye.

HOBSON. You'll waste your time.

DOCTOR. I'll cure you, Mr. Hobson.

HOBSON. She won't come back.

DOCTOR. Oh. Now that's a possibility. If she's a sensible body I concur with your opinion she'll no come back, but women are a soft-hearted race and she'll maybe take pity on ye after all.

HOBSON. I want no pity.

DOCTOR. If she's the woman that I take her for ye'll get no pity. Ye'll get discipline.

[HOBSON tries to speak.]

Don't interrupt me, sir. I'm talking.

HOBSON. I've noticed it.

DOCTOR. You asked me for a cure, and Maggie's the name of the cure you need. Maggie, sir, do you hear? Maggie!

[Enter MAGGIE left, in outdoor clothes.]

MAGGIE. What about me?

DOCTOR [staggered then]. Are you Maggie?

MAGGIE. I'm Maggie.

DOCTOR. Ye'll do.

HOBSON [getting his breath]. What are you doing under my roof?

MAGGIE. I've come because I was fetched.

HOBSON. Who fetched you?

MAGGIE. Tubby Wadlow.

HOBSON [rising]. Tubby can quit my shop this minute.

DOCTOR [putting him back]. Sit down, Mr. Hobson.

MAGGIE. He said you're dangerously ill.

DOCTOR. He is. I'm Doctor Macfarlane. Will you come and live here agin?

MAGGIE. I'm married.

DOCTOR. I know that, Mrs.—

MAGGIE. Mossop.

DOCTOR. Your father's drinking himself to death, Mrs. Mossop.

HOBSON. Look here, Doctor, what's passed between you and me isn't for everybody's ears.

DOCTOR. I judge your daughter's not the sort to want the truth wrapped round with a feather-bed for fear it hits her hard.

MAGGIE [nodding appreciatively]. Go on. I'd like to hear it all.

HOBSON. Just nasty-minded curiosity.

DOCTOR. I don't agree with you, Mr. Hobson. If Mrs. Mossop is to sacrifice her own home to come to you, she's every right to know the reason why.

HOBSON. Sacrifice! If you saw her home you'd find another word than that. Two cellars in Old-field Road.

MAGGIE. I'm waiting, Doctor.

DOCTOR. I've a constitutional objection to seeing patients slip through me fingers when it's avoidable, Mrs. Mossop, and I'll do ma best for your father, but ma medicine will na do him any good without your medicine to back me up. He needs a tight hand on him all the time.

MAGGIE. I've not the chance I had before I married.

DOCTOR. Ye'll have no chance at all unless ye come and live here. I willna talk about the duty of a daughter because I doubt he's acted badly by ye, but on the broad grounds of humanity, it's saving life if ye'll come——

MAGGIE. I might.

DOCTOR. Nay, but will ye?

MAGGIE. You've told me what you think. The rest's my business.

HOBSON. That's right, Maggie. [To DOCTOR.] That's what you get for interfering with folks' private affairs. So now you can go, with your tail between your legs, Doctor Macfarlane.

DOCTOR. On the contrary, I am going, Mr. Hobson, with the profound conviction that I leave you in excellent hands. One prescription is on the table,

Mrs. Mossop. The other two are total abstinence and—you.

MAGGIE [nodding amiably]. Good morning.

DOCTOR. Good morning.

[Exit DOCTOR left. MAGGIE picks up prescription and follows to door left.]

MAGGIE. Tubby!

[She stands by door, TUBBY just enters inside it.]

Go round to Oldfield Road and ask my husband to come here and get this made up at Hallows on your way back.

TUBBY. Yes, Miss—Mrs. Mossop.

MAGGIE. Tell Mr. Mossop that I want him quick.

[TUBBY nods and goes.]

HOBSON. Maggie, you know I can't be an abstainer. A man of my habits. At my time of life.

MAGGIE. You can if I come here to make you.

HOBSON. Are you coming?

MAGGIE. I don't know yet. I haven't asked my husband.

HOBSON. You ask Will Mossop! Maggie, I'd better thoughts of you. Making an excuse like that to me. If you want to come you'll come so what Will Mossop says and well you know it.

MAGGIE. I don't want to come, father. I expect no holiday existence here with you to keep in health. But if Will tells me it's my duty I shall come.

HOBSON. You know as well as I do asking Will's a matter of form.

MAGGIE. Matter of form! My husband a matter of form! He's the——

HOBSON. I daresay, but he is not the man that wears the breeches at your house.

MAGGIE. My husband's my husband, father, so whatever else he is. And my home's my home, and all and what you said of it now to Doctor Macfarlane's a thing you'll pay for. It's no gift to a married woman to come back to the home she's shut of.

HOBSON. Look here, Maggie, you're talking straight and I'll talk straight and all. When I'm set I'm set. You're coming here. I didn't want you when that doctor said it, but, by gum, I want you now. It's been my daughters' hobby crossing me. Now you'll come and look after me.

MAGGIE. All of us?

HOBSON. No. Not all of you. You're eldest.

MAGGIE. There's another man with claims on me.

HOBSON. I'll give him claims. Aren't I your father?

[ALICE enters left. She is rather elaborately dressed for so early in the day.]

MAGGIE. And I am not your only daughter.

ALICE. You been here long, Maggie?

MAGGIE. A while.

ALICE. Ah, well, a fashionable solicitor's wife doesn't rise so early as the wife of a working cobbler. You'd be up when Tubby came.

MAGGIE. A couple of hours earlier.

ALICE. You're looking all right, father. You've quite a color.

HOBSON. I'm very ill.

MAGGIE. He's not so well, Alice. The doctor says one of us must come and live here to look after him.

ALICE. I live in the Crescent myself.

MAGGIE. I've heard it was that way on. Somebody's home will have to go.

ALICE. I don't think I can be expected to come back to this after what I've been used to lately.

HOBSON. Alice!

ALICE. Well, I say it ought to be Maggie, father. She's the eldest.

HOBSON. And I say you're——

[What she is we don't learn, as VICKEY enters effectively and goes effusively to HOBSON.]

VICKEY. Father, you're ill! [Embracing him.]

HOBSON. Vickey! My baby! At last I find a daughter who cares for me.

VICKEY. Of course I care. Don't the others? [Releasing herself from his grasp.]

HOBSON. You will live with me, Vickey, won't you?

VICKEY. What? [She stands away from him.]

MAGGIE. One of us is needed to look after him.

VICKEY. Oh, but it can't be me. In my circumstances, Maggie!

MAGGIE. What circumstances?

ALICE. Don't you know?

MAGGIE. No.

[VICKEY whispers to MAGGIE.]

HOBSON. What's the matter? What are you all whispering about?

MAGGIE. Father, don't you think you ought to put a collar on before Will comes?

HOBSON. Put a collar on for Will Mossop? There's something wrong with your sense of proportion, my girl.

VICKEY. You're always pretending to folk about your husband, Maggie, but you needn't keep it up with us. We know Will here.

MAGGIE. Father, I can go home or you can go and put a collar on for Will. I'll have him treated with respect.

ALICE. I expect you'd put a collar on in any case, father.

HOBSON. Of course I should. I'm going to put one on. But understand me, Maggie, it's not for the sake of Will Mossop. It's because my neck is cold.

[Exit HOBSON centre.]

MAGGIE. Now, then, which of us is it to be?

VICKEY. It's no use looking at me like that, Maggie. I've told you I'm expecting.

MAGGIE. I don't see that that rules you out. It might happen to any of us.

ALICE. Maggie!

MAGGIE. What's the matter? Children do happen to married women, and we're all married.

ALICE. Well, I'm not going to break my home up and that's flat.

VICKEY. My child comes first with me.

MAGGIE. I see. You've got a house of furniture, and you've got a child coming, so father can drink himself to death for you.

ALICE. That's not fair speaking. I'd come if there were no one else. You know very well it's your duty, Maggie.

VICKEY. Duty? I should think it 'ud be a pleasure to live here after a year of two cellars.

MAGGIE. I've had thirty years of the pleasure of living with father, thanks.

ALICE. Do you mean to say you won't come?

MAGGIE. It isn't for me to say at all. It's for my husband.

VICKEY. Oh, do stop talking about your husband. If Alice and I don't need to ask our husbands, I'm sure you never need ask yours. Will Mossop hasn't the spirit of a louse and we know it as well as you do.

MAGGIE. Maybe Will's come on since you saw him, Vickey. It's getting a while ago. There he is now in the shop. I'll go and put it to him.

[Exit MAGGIE left.]

VICKEY. Stop her! [Going to door.]

ALICE [detaining her]. Let her do it in her own way. I'm not coming back here.

VICKEY. Nor me.

ALICE. There's only Maggie for it.

VICKEY. Yes. But we've got to be careful, Alice. She mustn't have things too much her way.

ALICE. It's our way as well, isn't it?

VICKEY. Not coming is our way. But when she's with him alone and we're not—— [Stopping.]

ALICE. Yes.

VICKEY. Can't you see what I'm thinking, Alice? It is so different to say. Suppose poor father gets worse and they are here, Maggie and Will, and you and I—out of sight and out of mind. Can't you see what I mean?

ALICE. He might leave them his money!

VICKEY. That would be most unfair to us.

ALICE. Father must make his will at once. Albert shall draw it up.

VICKEY. That's it, Alice. And don't let's leave Maggie too long with Will. She's only telling him what to say, and then she'll pretend he thought of it himself. [She opens door left.] Why, Will, what are you doing up the ladder?

WILLIE [off left]. I'm looking over the stock.

VICKEY [indignantly]. It's father's stock, not yours.

WILLIE. That's so. But if I'm to come into a thing I like to know what I'm coming into.

ALICE. That's never Willie Mossop.

VICKEY [still by door]. Are you coming into this?

[WILL enters left. MAGGIE follows him. He is not aggressive, but he is prosperous and has self-confidence. Against ALICE and VICKEY he is consciously on his mettle.]

WILLIE. That's the proposal, isn't it?

VICKEY. I didn't know it was.

WILLIE. Now, then, Maggie, go and bring your father down and be sharp. I'm busy at my shop, so what they are at his.

[MAGGIE crosses and exits centre.
It's been a good business in its day, too, has Hobson's.

ALICE. What on earth do you mean? It's a good business still.

WILLIE. You try to sell it, and you'd learn. Stock and goodwill 'ud fetch about two hundred.

VICKEY. Don't talk so foolish, Will. Two hundred for a business like father's!

WILLIE. Two hundred as it is. Not as it was in our time, Vickey.

ALICE. Do you mean to tell me father isn't rich?

WILLIE. If you'd not married into the law you'd know what they think of your father to-day in trading circles. Vickey ought to know. Her husband's in trade.

VICKEY [indignantly]. My Fred in trade!

WILLIE. Isn't he?

VICKEY. He's in the wholesale. That's business, not trade. And the value of father's shop is no affair of yours, Will Mossop.

WILLIE. Now I thought maybe it was. If Maggie and me are coming here——

VICKEY. You're coming to look after father.

WILLIE. Maggie can do that. I'll look after the business.

ALICE. You'll do what's arranged for you.

WILLIE. I'll do the arranging, Alice. If we come here, we come here on my terms.

VICKEY. They'll be fair terms.

WILLIE. I'll see they're fair to me and Maggie.

ALICE. Will Mossop, do you know who you're talking to?

WILLIE. Aye. My wife's young sisters. Times have changed a bit since you used to order me about this shop, haven't they, Alice?

ALICE. Yes. I'm Mrs. Albert Prosser now.

WILLIE. So you are, to outsiders. And you'd be surprised the number of people that call me Mr.

MOSSOP now. We do get on in the world, don't we?

VICKEY. Some folks get on too fast.

WILLIE. It's a matter of opinion. I know Maggie and me gave both of you a big leg up when we arranged your marriage portions, but I dunno that we're grudging you the sudden lift you got.

[Enter HOBSON and MAGGIE centre.]

WILLIE. Good morning, father. I'm sorry to hear you're not so well.

HOBSON. I'm a changed man, Will. [He crosses and sits on sofa.]

WILLIE [sitting by table]. There used to be room for improvement.

HOBSON. What! [He starts up.]

MAGGIE. Sit down, father.

WILLIE. Aye. Don't let us be too long about this. You've kept me waiting now a good while and my time's valuable. I'm busy at my shop.

HOBSON. Is your shop more important than my life?

WILLIE. That's a bit like asking if a pound of tea weighs heavier than a pound of lead. I'm worried about your life because it worrits Maggie, but I'm none worritted that bad I'll see my business suffer for the sake of you.

HOBSON. This isn't what I've a right to expect from you, Will.

WILLIE. You've no right to expect I care whether you sink or swim.

MAGGIE. Will!

WILLIE. What's to do? You told me to take a high hand, didn't you?

ALICE. And we're to stay here and watch Maggie and Will abusing father when he's ill.

WILLIE. No need for you to stay.

HOBSON. That's a true word, Will Mossop.

VICKEY. Father! You take his side against your flesh and blood.

HOBSON. That doesn't come too well from you, my girl. Neither of you would leave your homes to come to care for me. You're not for me, so you're against me.

ALICE. We're not against you, father. We want to stay and see that Will deals fairly by you.

HOBSON. Oh, I'm not capable of looking after myself, amn't I? I've to be protected by you girls lest I'm overreached, and overreached by whom? By Willie Mossop! I may be ailing, but I've fight enough left in me for a dozen such as him, and if you're thinking that the manhood's gone from me, you can go and think it somewhere else than in my house.

VICKEY. But father—dear father——

HOBSON. I'm not so dear to you if you'd to think twice about coming here to do for me, let alone jibbing at it the way you did. A proper daughter would have jumped—aye, skipped like a calf by the cedars of Lebanon—at the thought of being helpful to her father.

ALICE. Did Maggie skip?

HOBSON. She's a bit ancient for skipping exercise, is Maggie; but she's coming round to reconciliation with the thought of living here, and that is more than you are doing, Alice, isn't it? Eh? Are you willing to come?

ALICE [sullenly]. No.

HOBSON. Or you, Vickey?

VICKEY. It's my child, father. I——

HOBSON. Never mind what it is. Are you for coming or not?

VICKEY. No.

HOBSON. Then you that aren't willing can leave me to talk with them that are.

ALICE. Do you mean that we're to go?

HOBSON. I understand you've homes to go to.

ALICE. Oh, father!

HOBSON. Open the door for them, Will.

[WILL opens.]

VICKEY [passing him]. Beggars on horseback.

[VICKEY goes out.]

WILLIE. Nay, come, there's no ill-will.

[ALICE goes out.]

MAGGIE [by door]. We'll be glad to see you here at tea-time on a Sunday afternoon if you'll condescend to come sometimes.

[WILL closes door. He and MAGGIE sit.]

HOBSON. Now, my lad, I'll tell you what I'll do.

WILLIE. Aye, we can come to grips better now there are no fine ladies about.

HOBSON. They've got stiff necks with pride, and the difference between you two and them's a thing I ought to mark and that I'm going to mark. There's times for holding back and times for letting loose, and being generous. Now, you're coming here, to this house, both of you, and you can have the back bedroom for your own and the use of this room split along with me. Maggie 'ull keep house, and if she's time to spare she can lend a hand in the shop. I'm finding Will a job. You can come back to your old bench in the cellar, Will, and I'll pay you the old wage of eighteen shillings a week and you and me 'ull go equal whacks in the cost of the housekeeping, and if that's not handsome, I dunno what is. I'm finding you a house rent free and paying half the keep of your wife.

WILLIE. Come home, Maggie. [He rises.]

MAGGIE. I think I'll have to. [She rises.]

HOBSON. Whatever's the hurry for?

WILLIE. It may be news to you, but I've a business round in Oldfield Road and I'm neglecting it with wasting my time here.

HOBSON. Wasting time? Maggie, what's the matter with Will? I've made him a proposal.

[WILL is by door.]

MAGGIE. He's a shop of his own to see to, father.

HOBSON [incredulous]. A man who's offered a job at Hobson's doesn't want to worry with a shop of his own in a wretched cellar in Oldfield Road.

WILLIE. Shall I tell him, Maggie, or shall we go?

HOBSON. Go! I don't want to keep a man who——

MAGGIE. If he goes, I go with him, father. You'd better speak out, Will.

WILLIE. All right, I will. We've been a year in yon wretched cellar and do you know what we've done? We've paid off Mrs. Hepworth what she lent us for our start and made a bit o' brass on top o' that. We've got your high-class trade away from you. That shop's a cellar, and as you say, it's wretched, but they come to us in it, and they don't come to you. Your trade's gone down till all you sell is clogs. You've got no trade, and me and Maggie's got it all and now you're on your bended knees to her to come and live with you, and all you think to offer me is my old job at eighteen shillings a week. Me that's the owner of a business that is starving yours to death.

HOBSON. But—but—you're Will Mossop, you're my old shoe hand.

WILLIE. Aye. I were, but I've a move on me since then. Your daughter married me and set about my education. And—and now I'll tell you what I'll do and it'll be the handsome thing and all from me to you. I'll close my shop——

HOBSON. Oh? That doesn't sound like doing so well.

WILLIE. I'm doing well, but I'll do better here. I'll transfer to this address and what I'll do that's generous is this: I'll take you into partnership and give you your half-share on the condition you're sleeping partner and you don't try interference on with me.

HOBSON. A partner! You—here——

WILLIE. William Mossop, late Hobson, is the name this shop 'ull have.

MAGGIE. Wait a bit, Will. I don't agree to that.

HOBSON. Oh, so you have piped up at last. I began to think you'd both lost your senses together.

MAGGIE. It had better not be "late Hobson."

WILLIE. Well, I meant it should.

HOBSON. Just wait a bit. I want to know if I'm taking this in aright. I'm to be given a half-share in my own business on condition I take no part in running it. Is that what you said?

WILLIE. That's it.

HOBSON. Well, I've heard of impudence before, but——

MAGGIE. It's all right, father.

HOBSON. But did you hear what he said?

MAGGIE. Yes. That's settled. Quite settled, father. It's only the name we're arguing about. I won't have "late Hobson's," Will.

HOBSON. I'm not dead, yet, my lad, and I'll show you I'm not.

MAGGIE. I think Hobson and Mossop is best.

HOBSON. His name on my sign-board!

WILLIE. The best I'll do is this: Mossop and Hobson.

MAGGIE. No.

WILLIE. Mossop and Hobson or it's Oldfield Road for us, Maggie. [By door.]

MAGGIE. Very well. Mossop and Hobson.

HOBSON. But—

WILLIE [opening door, and looking through]. I'll make some alterations in this shop, and all. I will so. [He goes through door and returns at once with a battered cane chair.]

HOBSON. Alterations in my shop!

WILLIE. In mine. Look at that chair. How can you expect the high-class customers to come and sit on a chair like that? Why, we'd only a cellar, but they did sit on cretonne for their trying on.

HOBSON. Cretonne! It's pampering folk.

WILLIE. Cretonne for a cellar, and morocco for this shop. Folk like to be pampered. Pampering pays. [He takes the chair out and returns immediately.] There'll be a carpet on that floor, too.

HOBSON. Carpet! Morocco! Young man, do you think this shop is in Saint Ann's Square, Manchester?

WILLIE. Not yet. But it is going to be.

HOBSON. What does he mean? [Appealing to heaven.]

WILLIE. It's no farther from Chapel Street to Saint Ann's Square than it is from Oldfield Road to Chapel Street. I've done one jump in a year and if I wait a bit I'll do the other. Maggie, I reckon your father could do with a bit of fresh air after this. I daresay it's come sudden to him. Suppose you walk with him to Albert Prosser's office and get Albert to draw up the deed of partnership.

HOBSON [looking pathetically first at MAGGIE, then at WILLIE, rising obediently]. I'll go and get my hat.

[Exit HOBSON centre.]

WILLIE. He's crushed-like, Maggie. I'm afraid I bore on him too hard.

MAGGIE. You needn't be.

WILLIE. I—said such things to him, and they sounded as if I meant them, too.

MAGGIE. Didn't you?

WILLIE. Did I? Yes . . . I suppose I did. That's just the worst . . . from me to him.

You told me to be strong and use the power that's come to me through you, but he's the old master, and——

MAGGIE. And you're the new.

WILLIE. Master of Hobson's! It's an outrageous idea. Did I sound confident, Maggie?

MAGGIE. You did all right.

WILLIE. Eh, but I weren't by half so certain as I sounded. Words came from my mouth that made me jump at my own boldness, and when it came to facing you about the name, I tell you I fair trembled in my shoes. I was carried away like, or I'd not have dared to cross you, Maggie.

MAGGIE. Don't spoil it, Will. You're the man I've made you and I'm proud.

WILLIE. Thy pride is not in same street, lass, with the pride I have in you. And that reminds me. I've a job to see to.

MAGGIE. What job?

WILLIE. Oh—about the improvements.

MAGGIE. You'll not do owt without consulting me.

WILLIE. I'll do this, lass. [Takes her hand.]

MAGGIE. What are you doing? You leave my wedding ring alone. [Wrenches hand free.]

WILLIE. You've worn a brass one long enough.

MAGGIE. I'll wear that ring forever, Will.

WILLIE. I was for getting you a proper one, Maggie.

MAGGIE. I'm not preventing you. I'll wear your gold for show, but that brass stays where you put it, Will, and if we get too rich and proud we'll just sit down together quiet and take a long look at it, so as we'll not forget the truth about ourselves.

[Enter HOBSON centre with his hat on.]

MAGGIE. Ready, father. Come along to Albert's.

HOBSON [meekly]. Yes, Maggie.

[They cross together to left.]

FOR

HOBSON'S CHOICE

“Hobson's Choice” is generally regarded as an example of the Folk Drama. Discuss the specific features of this school. Its preoccupation with the life of the humbler classes of society. Its value in presenting intimate and vivid studies of local types. Does this in any way limit the universality of the appeal? Does it not, on the contrary, actually widen the appeal?

Analyze the leading traits of the Lancashire character as depicted in “Hobson's Choice.” Those who are in a position to know say that Maggie Hobson is not overdrawn for the purposes of the comedy, that she is a typical Lancashire woman. Discuss her character.

It has been objected that the year which is supposed to elapse between the third and fourth acts is not long enough to permit of Willie Mossop's development from the shy and awkward workman to the self-confident and successful shopkeeper. Is this criticism valid? Does not the author from the very beginning lead one to anticipate it? Allowing for Maggie's influence is it, or is it not, defensible?

Compare “Hobson's Choice” with other examples of the Folk Drama—“Change” and “Kindling” in this series, also Masfield's “Nan” and the plays written for the Irish Theatre. How does “Hobson's Choice” compare with these plays in point of view, method of construction, dialogue, characterization, etc.
